

Blizzard Ties Up Traffic in Northern Part Of Wisconsin

Streets and Highways Closed in Superior Area
LARGE DRIFTS

Snow and Sleet Reported In Other Parts Of State

Milwaukee — (AP)—Northern Wisconsin peninsula battled today to shake off the effects of a paralyzing blizzard, one of the severest in a decade, which brought traffic to a standstill in some localities and caused numerous hardships.

Clear and cold weather replaced the blizzard today, with the temperature plummeting to 15 below zero at Superior where all but the main roadways were blocked by drifts piled up by the third intense storm in 10 days.

A cold mass of air moving southward was expected to bring still lower temperatures tonight.

Rail Traffic Resumed

The storm began Sunday morning, apparently raging fiercest in the area between Minneapolis-St. Paul and Superior-Duluth. Streets and highways had drifted shut by nightfall at Superior where trains were stalled for hours. All rail traffic was restored today.

But service between Superior and Duluth was suspended until a path was opened last night. Side streets in Superior remained impassable today, however, and rural schools were closed.

The latest blizzard added eight inches of snow to the 11 deposited in the previous storm and the wind whipped it into drifts that ranged nine and 10 feet deep.

Ashland also experienced paralyzed transportation as a northeast gale whipped into high drifts. All buses and trains out of the city were held up Sunday night. Crews from the city and county, and North Western and Soo Line railroads were cutting away the drifts today.

Autos Abandoned

Highways were dotted with cars abandoned when drivers found the going too hazardous.

Madison, La Crosse, Park Falls, Wausau and Green Bay reported snow. Sleet was reported at Sturgeon Bay late Sunday, while at Lone Rock a freezing rain fell Sunday night.

The ski carnival at Iron Mountain, Mich., was handicapped by a stiff wind which kept all but a few competitors off Pine hill, highest artificial ski hill in the world.

Northern Minnesota suffered equally as winds whipped freshly fallen snow, and sealed highways with drifts. Two fatalities were reported.

Forecaster H. A. Downs of Chicago said sub-zero weather prevailed in the Dakotas, Minnesota, western Iowa and down to Nebraska. He predicted near-zero weather tonight in Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana, and said the east, basking in a February "heat wave," would be jolted rudely to night and tomorrow by "decidedly colder" weather.

Form areas, which centered over the Rocky mountains Saturday, had moved to the upper St. Lawrence valley today. It brought precipitation during the weekend to nearly every section of the nation.

Fair and colder tonight and tomorrow is the forecast for Appleton and vicinity issued today by the Milwaukee weather bureau.

Temperatures were back to brisk levels today after a mild spell Sunday. At 8 o'clock this morning the thermometer hit a 24-hour low in Appleton when it registered seven above. Yesterday's high was 35 degrees, recorded at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

A severe drop in temperatures is forecast for the extreme southern portion of the state tonight, with slowly rising mercury tomorrow in the northwest area.

Tampa, Fla., with 52 degrees was the warmest place in the nation, yesterday. Devils Lake, N. D., was 28 below.

Naval Air Base Measure Will Be Considered Tomorrow and Wednesday, House Chiefs Say

ASKS STATE HELP

Springfield, Ill. — (AP)—President Arthur C. Williams, (above) and other University of Illinois officials today carried directly to acting Governor John Stille their plea for state aid in cleaning up vice conditions in the university community of Champaign. Entering a conference with Stille and Attorney General John E. Cassidy in the governor's office, Dr. Williams said the university would plead that "some sort of state action be taken," as an outgrowth of the playing last week of William Spurrer, 20-year-old university sophomore from Toledo, Ohio.

Washington — (AP)—The $53,800,000 naval air base bill sped forward in congress today—new evidence of a determination to bolster national defense.

Speaker Bankhead and Representative Rayburn of Texas, the house majority leader, announced the house would devote tomorrow and Wednesday to consideration of the legislation. They acted after the rules committee voted unanimously to ask the house to start voting after six hours of general debate.

Senator Nye (R-N.D.) proposed meanwhile to write into law army and navy regulations against the release of military aircraft for foreign governments.

Nye introduced in the senate a bill designed to safeguard for the United States any airplane or airplane appliance built under government contract according to government specifications or with the aid of government funds or research.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the naval committee and Congressman Maas (R-Minn.), ranking minority member, said they would grant "ample time" for arguments of opponents of the $53,000,000 item for developing a seaplane harbor at Guam.

Criticism Certain

Presidential hints of threatening developments abroad acted as a damper on congressional control, but there was no doubt the Guam project would be criticized.

Vinson told the rules committee the Guam item was the only controversial section of the 11-air base program. Even that, he said, constituted "no entering wedge" which might lead to actual fortification of the island.

"I wouldn't be here advocating development of Guam," he declared, "if I thought it would involve us in the Orient."

The Japanese press has looked with disfavor on any proposal to strengthen this far Pacific outpost of the United States and critics in this country have declared it would be provocative to do so.

Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn said in a senate house conference report on the first deficiency bill would come up

Triple Inquiry Begun in Rail Crash in Iowa

2 Dead, 23 Hurt When Freight Engine Hits Passenger Train

3 BADLY INJURED

Ambulances and Rescue Cars are Stalled in Muddy Roads

Harlan, Iowa — (AP)—A three-way investigation was under way today into the bizarre crash of a runaway freight engine and a passenger train which resulted in the loss of two lives and injuries to 23 persons.

The runaway engine, which exploded, backed into one of its own freight cars, and surged forward into the oncoming passenger train, grinding the two locomotives to a mass of steel wreckage and killing Henry Miller, passenger engineer, and A. D. Sellers, passenger fireman, both of Clarion, Iowa.

Three were injured critically. They were Walter J. Taylor of Minneapolis, Minn., Negro porter on the passenger train, James Connors, Council Bluffs, Iowa, passenger brakeman, and John Anderson, Council Bluffs, the Great Western train engineer, who was scalded when steam forced him from his cab.

So terrific was the crash — the speed of the passenger was estimated at 50 miles an hour — that boiler and cab of the runaway were sheared off the passenger locomotive was crushed like an eggshell and turned completely around, and the grain car was smashed to bits.

The injured were taken to Council Bluffs by train, after muddy roads had mired several ambulances and rescue cars sent to the scene.

Investigators from the interstate commerce commission, the Iowa commerce commission and the Great Western railroad pored over their findings today.

Peru Acts to Avert Added Revolt Plots

Interior Minister Killed While Attempting to Seize Power

4 OTHERS SLAIN

Official Attempts Coup d'Etat in Absence of President

Lima, Peru — (AP)—Precautionary measures were enforced today following a short-lived attempt by Interior Minister General Antonio Rodriguez to seize the government in the absence of his old friend, President Oscar Benavides.

General Rodriguez was killed by Sergeant Major Rizo Patron, who challenged Rodriguez's assertions that he was the chief executive because Benavides was sailing for Europe. One police officer, two patrolmen and a Japanese pedestrian were reported killed and 36 persons wounded in brief fighting that followed.

The attempted coup d'etat occurred about 2 o'clock a. m. yesterday when the general seized the presidential palace, proclaimed himself head of the government and issued manifestos explaining his plans for far-reaching measures to replace the Benavides administration. Rodriguez ordered Captain Ismodes, chief of the machine-gun section quartered at the palace, to relinquish the command to a new chief.

Phones for Troops

Ismodes, pretending to follow the orders, telephoned presidential quarters for troops, locked himself in a tower and trained machine guns on the palace entrance until soldiers arrived to assume strategic positions about the palace.

Rodriguez's death at the hands of Rizo Patron, leader of the first troops to arrive, apparently ended the movement. A few aides and retired General Cirilo Ortega were associated with Rodriguez, a commander said.

Rodriguez, considered one of the president's staunchest friends and supporters, escorted Benavides to Callao Saturday when a party of government officials boarded a naval transport for a three-day holiday.

The president hurried back to Lima when advised of the attempted coup, and called a special cabinet meeting.

Spanish War and French-Italian Dispute are Factors PEACE DELAYED

Territorial Demands on France Expected in Few Weeks

London — (AP)—With uncertainty still suspending Spain from war and peace, and fear growing that French-Italian tension soon may come to a head, the British government asked parliament today to approve what probably is the costliest peacetime re-armament program in history.

A two-day debate in the house of commons on defense—over a resolution to increase the government's borrowing power for defense from $2,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000—promised important revelations on Britain's foreign policy, armed strength and the pace of her re-arming.

Negotiations with Generalissimo Francisco for peace in Spain have been suspended. They struck a snag at the nationalists' Burgos headquarters last night when Franco's spokesmen ruled that only a victory at arms could end the civil war unless the government surrendered unconditionally.

French Demand

France has demanded a promise of clemency toward the government side and assurances Spain would be free of Italian and German forces as conditions for her recognition of Franco.

In London, however, Spanish peace was expected within a week or two and diplomats expected then to see Europe's most dangerous situation develop—Italian territorial demands on France.

During the weekend Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the Italian general staff, arrived in Libya, where troops already had been dispatched close to the borders of French Tunisia. France took defense measures on the borders of Tunisia and French Somaliland and arranged to put her Maginot line facing Germany—on a 36-hour "state of alert" Wednesday.

Moscow-Polish Pact

In Moscow, soviet Russia yesterday signed a most-favored nation trade agreement with Poland, continuing the trade drive in which she has concluded or renewed agreements in recent weeks with France, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

Members of the Balkan entente—Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Rumania—met in Bucharest. High on their agenda were efforts to get Bulgaria to join, consideration of recognition of nationalist Spain and discussion of Germany's political-economic drive in southeastern Europe.

Order was restored and a close watch kept in Lima, Peru, after a short-lived attempt yesterday of Interior Minister General Antonio Rodriguez to seize the government during a brief absence of President Oscar Benavides. General Rodriguez and four other persons were killed.

Pro-Nazi Meeting Gets Police Guard

1,500 Officers Sent to Bund Rally at Madison Square Gardens

New York — (AP)—Fifteen hundred policemen were assigned to Madison Square Garden by Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine today as extraordinary precautions were taken against any disorders at a pro-Nazi rally scheduled for tonight.

The officers were ordered to report at the garden, a block from the Broadway theatrical district, at 4 o'clock p. m. They will augment a 24-hour guard of 16 men which has patrolled the big black-square arena since Saturday, when reports reached city hall that three time bombs had been secreted in the building. No bombs were found.

Ernest Rice, organizer of the New York local of the Socialist Workers party, labelled the bomb scare reports as "deliberate provocations by fascists against contemplated anti-fascist action."

The German-American bund, sponsors of the rally, described it as a patriotic meeting in celebration of George Washington's birthday. The rally has been protested by American Legion units and other organizations and the Socialist Workers party has announced it would have as many pickets outside the building as there were persons inside.

Fritz Kuhn, bund leader, said that 3,000 uniformed "storm troopers" would help keep order.

Drunk Driver Fined $50, Costs Drives to Police Station To Lodge Complaint.

Jack Gauslin, 26, 326 E. Lincoln street, early this morning drove on the wrong side of the road to the police station to lodge a complaint against someone or other. Puzzled at the left-handed driving, police called in a physician who examined Gauslin.

"He's drunk," was the terse comment of the physician, and Gauslin, a complaint, was tossed into the clink for the night under a charge of drunken driving.

Appearing before Judge Thomas H. Ryan in Municipal court this morning, Gauslin pleaded guilty of drunken driving and was fined $50 and costs with an alternative of 60 days in the county detention camp under both the city and state laws. His driving license was revoked for a year. The state fine was remitted upon payment of the city fine and costs.

Five Persons Die In Auto Accidents

One Victim Drowns When Car Crashes Through River Ice

By the Associated Press

Five persons died in accidents in Wisconsin during the weekend, one drowning when an automobile broke through river ice. The dead: Alton Higgins, 16, Milwaukee; Louis Will, 50, LaCrosse; B. L. Gibbs, about 60, Lewis (Polk county).

George Nelson, 49, Westbr. Mrs. Marie Stuessy, 68, town of Granville (Milwaukee county).

Young Higgins was injured fatally last night while he and three other youths were pushing their automobile across a bridge in Milwaukee after running out of gasoline. They were struck from behind by another car. The other boys were injured seriously.

Wild's body was recovered Saturday night several hours after the couple in which he was riding with Robert Kallenbach, 23, broke through ice over the Mississippi near LaCrosse. Kallenbach swam ashore.

Gibbs was killed at his farm Saturday when boxing of a circular saw, with which he was cutting wood, broke loose and struck him.

Mrs. Stuessy was killed by a truck Saturday as she crossed a Milwaukee street.

Hunt for Missing California Girl

Officials Fear Child Was Kidnaped From Her Home

Pasadena, Calif. — (AP)—Police launched a wide-scale hunt today for an 8-year-old Pasadena girl, Anne Louise Sweitzer, feared kidnaped from her home.

Detective W. G. Collins said the child left the house yesterday, telling her parents she was going to play at a neighbor's yard.

Collins said he was informed by Mrs. Jennie Purcell that she had seen Anne Louise about noon in the automobile of her nephew, a 40-year-old gardener.

Mrs. Purcell reported the man, who made his home with her, removed his clothes and personal effects to the car and drove away.

Police were told the gardener had become acquainted with the girl while working in the Sweitzer neighborhood. Unable to locate the pair, officers broadcast an alarm throughout southern California.

The missing child's father, Ralph Sweitzer, is a disabled World War flier.

Jersey City Mayor's Son Appointed Judge

Trenton, N. J. — (AP)—Frank Hague, Jr., son of the Jersey City mayor and state Democratic leader, was appointed today by Governor A. Harry Moore as a lay judge of the court of errors and appeals, New Jersey's highest law tribunal.

Auto Company May Face Demands From Two Union Factions

Detroit — (AP)—Plymouth division of the Chrysler corporation appeared likely today to face demands for recognition from both factions in the United Auto Workers' union, a state of affairs the automobile industry has been fearing for some time.

The situation arose as a result of the division of opinion in the Plymouth local, whose books and other property last week were the subject of a court battle.

The faction supporting Homer Martin won the revivification action and Sunday installed as president F. J. "Pat" McCartney, a stalwart in the Martin group.

Leo LaMotte is president of the CIO faction in Plymouth local.

Eat and Digest Beauty

"Foods that will beautify women" was the prospect offered by the vicepresident of a large foods corporation at recent current events forum attended by 3,000 New York clubwomen. Some of them seemed to feel they didn't need any beauty-food, but the majority ate it up. Likely they'll over-eat soon; these charm-and-contour delicacies are on the market. Beauty may of course be "good though used," as the ad-men say. But as beauty foods will seldom be used second-hand, they may never be listed in The Post-Crescent classified want-ads. This one sold beautiful goods:

Medical and Hospital Groups to Announce Plan 'Within Month'

Madison — (AP)—Conferences between three leading Wisconsin medical and hospital groups to formulate a plan for statewide hospital insurance which have been held since last October are expected to result in a definite announcement "within a month," it was disclosed here today.

George J. Crownhart, secretary of the state medical society, said his organization was working with representatives of the Wisconsin Hospital association and the Wisconsin Conference of Catholic Hospitals and insurance counsel to present "a plan of hospital insurance which we feel is the best way to carry it out."

While the program would only cover strictly hospital services, Crownhart said the state medical society was engaged in "laboratory work" in Douglas county testing a medical insurance plan.

For a certain sum, complete medical services are being furnished a group of persons along cooperative lines, Crownhart said. He added that two or three more county medical societies may try such projects.

Crownhart said the last meeting of the three organizations was held here yesterday and another one is planned in three weeks, with no decision on any plan expected until then.

Representing the hospital association were Ralph Owen, Eau Claire; Leo Luckness, Madison; and George Eitenheim, Milwaukee; the Conference of Catholic Hospitals, Sister Syra, LaCrosse; Sister Mary Bernadette, Madison; and Sister Baptista, Appleton; the state medical society, Dr. James C. Sargent, Milwaukee; Dr. Steven V. Gavin, Fond du Lac, and Crownhart.

United States Leads In Air. Delegates Told

Washington — (AP)—Several hundred delegates to one of the largest aviation conferences in the history of American flying were told today that feverish research work on warplanes in Europe had failed to rob the United States of technical leadership.

Gill Robb Wilson of Trenton, N. J., war-time flier and chairman of the joint aviation council, said in a prepared address that the United States has the finest airplanes in the world.

"Our aeronautical engineers," he said, "have produced the finest equipment in the world."

"It is less than justice to them to let the least hint of hysteria in light of the growing tension and rearmament race in Europe, creep in to the minds of the American people."

Denies Congress Right In Lake Diversion Case

Cleveland — (AP)—Congress has no power to authorize Chicago's diversion of water from Lake Michigan, R. F. Malia of Milwaukee, secretary of the Great Lakes Harbor association, asserted today before attorneys general of four Great Lakes states who met here to plan a last-ditch fight to defeat the Parsons bill.

"It is Congress that has the right to resist the action all the way to the supreme court," Malia declared.

Dollar Day Bargains Will be Offered by Stores Thursday

Shoppers of Appleton and vicinity will be given another opportunity to purchase high quality goods at greatly reduced prices when more than 60 Appleton stores cooperate on Dollar Day Thursday.

Winter goods will be offered at bargain prices, new merchandise will be found on the counters, and hundreds of commodities will be marked down drastically for the special cooperative event.

Richard Muller is chairman for Dollar Day. Other members of the committee are Royall La Rose, Clark Teel, and Ray Eschelbacher. The committee has been working for several weeks on plans for the bargain day.

Articles usually sold for prices far above the dollar level will be slashed to meet that figure on Thursday. Clothing for men, women, and children, kitchen utensils, foods—in fact almost any commodity that can be named will be reduced so that shoppers who crowd the city's downtown section Thursday will return home feeling their expeditions were worth the time and effort made.

Stores cooperating in Dollar Day will be designated with banners and clerks will wear buttons in observance of the event. Windows will be redressed and a greater volume of goods placed on display.

More Italian Troops

London — (AP)—An Italian decision to send "30,000 more troops" to Libya in North Africa, was announced today in the house of commons as the British government sought approval of its costly re-armament program.

R. A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, said Italy had informed Lord Perth, British ambassador to Rome, she was "sending 30,000 more troops to Libya... to provide for the security" of the North African territory.

Thirty thousand troops had remained in Libya after reductions in the force had been effected under the Anglo-Italian accord ratified last November.

Three Men Facing Charges of Thefts At Truck Terminal

Public Service Commission Offers Help in Investigation

Madison—(P)—While three men were taken into superior court today for arraignment on charges of stealing merchandise from a truck terminal, which served as headquarters for several Wisconsin and Minnesota lines, the state public service commission offered to assist state officials in their investigation.

Edward W. Bierer, operator of the Madison Transit company, pleaded innocent to a charge of larceny and was bound over for preliminary hearing Feb. 28 under $1,000 bail.

Norman Flom, 31, and Ben Jacoby, 27, both of Madison, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a radio and were remanded to the sheriff's custody under deferred sentence.

Arrest of the three men Saturday climaxed two years of investigation into thefts of goods from the terminal, which was used by the Hillside Transit company of Milwaukee, Werner Transportation company of Minneapolis, Service Transfer and Storage company of LaCrosse, the Madison Transit company and Roy's Transfer of Madison.

Theft in 1937. Bierer was charged with the theft Sept. 10, 1937, of 144 children's play suits, part of a shipment en route from St. Paul, Minn., to Rockford, Ill., and Flom and Jacoby were charged with the theft of a $177 radio about a week ago. Police said 69 of the play suits were found in a general store at Deerfield.

While waiting at police headquarters Saturday to make a statement regarding the thefts, Chester Irving Gleason, 60, of Madison, collapsed and died. Detective Captain John R. Arnold said.

The public service commission, in addition to offering assistance to District Attorney Norris E. Maloney, announced it had started an investigation to determine whether there had been any violation of the state motor transportation law. Bierer, the commission said, was ordered early in December to show cause why his certificate to operate a truck line should not be revoked for willful violation of the state motor transportation law in collection of illegal charges on shipments.

The commission said it dismissed the proceedings on condition that Bierer make a monthly audit of his freight bills.

Conference Maps Out Program on Social Problems

Delegates to Set Up Legislative Office in Madison

Madison—(P)—A broad program relating to social problems was adopted here yesterday by the Wisconsin State Conference on Social Legislation at the closing session of a two-day meeting.

The delegates decided to set up a permanent statewide organization and establish a legislative office in Madison.

Representative of labor unions, educational, religious, social work and cooperative groups, women's clubs and youth organizations attended the weekend discussions.

The plan for permanent organization outlined by Assemblyman Paul Alfonsi, (P), Pence, provides for selection of two delegates from each congressional district, and one delegate from each of the civic, economic, and farm organizations of the state.

Alfonsi said a subcommittee of seven would be set up to arrange for naming the congressional district representatives, while the various organizations would choose their own delegates.

The conference went on record against any weakening of the objectives of the national labor relations act and recommended that labor unions of the state declare a holiday on the day when the legislature votes on the "employment peace act" sponsored by the Wisconsin council of Agriculture, and that the members march to Madison to oppose it.

It approved all legislation proposed by the Farmers Educational and Cooperative Equity union as against bills sponsored by the council of agriculture, and favored a program to promote harmony between farm and labor groups.

The conference also urged the legislature to authorize a committee of the university college of agriculture and representatives of "legitimate farm organizations" to investigate monopoly control of farm prices.

Opposed Assemblyman Maurice Fitzsimmons bill to limit public employment of married persons.

Back Amie For Job. Supported President Roosevelt's appointment of Thomas R. Amie to the federal interstate commerce commission.

Opposed any budget cuts for educational service in Wisconsin.

Urged the legislature to authorize congress to pass an emergency appropriation of $275,000 to prevent mass lay-offs on WPA.

Opposed "any attempt to foist a sales tax on the people of Wisconsin, whether it be disguised as a luxury tax or a tax on gross income."

Supported Alfonsi's bill to require the state to increase its share of old age assistance payments from 30 percent to 60 percent, so that pensions may be increased without additional cost to counties.

Supported bills by Senator Walter J. Rauh, Assemblymen Laurie Carlson and W. W. Clark to extend the emergency mortgage moratorium legislation to April 1, 1941.

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

American Foreign Policy in the Making: Inland and Seaboard Opinion

There have been moments when it looked as if the country might become sharply divided on national defense and foreign policy. But there are I believe reasons for thinking that the critical period may now have been passed.

The material of a great controversy, like that between Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson from 1915 to 1917, like that between Wilson and the Senate in 1919-20 does not really exist. There is no responsible party which thinks the United States can afford to be weak in a world where all other nations are armed to the teeth; there is no party which proposes to entangle this country in the territorial conflicts of Europe, Asia and Africa; there is no party which proposes to surrender in either ocean the vital security of this hemisphere.

The growing conviction of the people on these essential matters is that, I believe, exercised its influence at both ends of the Capitol. There has been a sharp check upon the very human temptation to play politics with national defense. When Congress assembled the temptation was fairly strong. There was undoubtedly a feeling in certain quarters of the New Deal that excitement about things abroad would blanket domestic issues and perhaps make the happy days be here again. In Congress there were some who exhibited every known symptom of the Presidential itch and acted accordingly; there were others in the Republican camp who were all set to manufacture a partisan quarrel.

But public sentiment has wanted none of these things, and my impression is that the patriotic common sense of the great mass of the people has already imposed a check upon the temptation to play politics with these questions of life and death. The action of the House in approving the Army bill by an almost unanimous vote is a surer test of the underlying national opinion than the speeches and statements of individuals.

Difference of Opinion Basically Geographical

The significant differences that do exist in regard to American foreign policy are not partisan. They are not class differences. They are not ideological. They are not due to hyphenated allegiance. Though there are traces of all these elements, the basic difference in American opinion is geographical. The United States is a continental nation, and the beginning of any discussion about foreign relations there is a different approach by the people of the Atlantic Seaboard, the Pacific Seaboard, the Pacific Seaboard, and the great inland territory of the Mississippi Valley.

This is not a new thing in American life. It is an old thing, realized by every one who stops to think of it, but often forgotten in the heat of debate. It should not be forgotten. For only by remembering the controlling influence of geography on American opinion can we really know ourselves and attain a national opinion.

There were fifteen votes cast in the House against the Army bill. All but two, those of Mr. Lewis K. Rockefeller, who represents a rural constituency in New York, and that of Mr. Rich, who represents northern Pennsylvania, were cast by Congressmen from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Kansas, Nebraska, and North Dakota. There was not a single vote from the Atlantic Seaboard, and none from the whole of the South.

Though there is no rule in politics that does not have an exception, there is obviously a rule at work here. Why is it that only in the central and northern parts of the United States does there exist in substantial strength a feeling among people, who are as patriotic as any other people in the land, that additional military defenses are not needed?

The reason is plain enough. It seems to me if one were to search wide world over for a place that was safe on all danger of invasion, bombardment or foreign intimidation, that region would be the rocky ridge lying between the Rockies and the Alleghenies and north of the Mason and Dixon Line. No hostile army will get at the people of that region. No hostile navy can touch them. No hostile airplane can come near them. Their nearest neighbor is Canada, and as Stephen Leacock remarked recently, that is a wonderful frontier because it is thousands of miles long and no one knows just where it is.

What is more, the Mississippi Valley is a region which would be more prosperous if it could export more of its products. But, if it cannot export, it will never starve. It is one of the great food producing areas of the world. A people that can never be invaded and never be starved are not going to become unduly excited about foreign affairs.

U. S. Policy Must be Based on Understanding

Is it strange that the people of this inland region are less disposed to become excited about the rest of the two coastal regions? Is not the reason why Senator Clark, of Missouri; Senator Nye, of North Dakota; Senator Capper, of Kansas, and Senator Taft, of Ohio, think as they do think—that the way to make America secure is to sit still in the inviolable security of the American interior? And are they not right as long as they keep their eyes fixed on the regions from which they come—as long as they do not look beyond the mountains which enclose the valley?

But the peoples of the two seaboard, and that includes the whole cotton and tobacco producing South, are, like peoples everywhere in the world who live on the frontier, much more immediately sensitive to what happens abroad. Mr. Hiram Johnson, of California, is known as a great isolationist. But he is no isolationist. Like Senator Clark, Senator Johnson wants isolation from Europe. But he has never been much of a pacifist or very shrinking where Japan was concerned. For California faces the Pacific. And on the Atlantic Seaboard, the emphasis is the other way. Public opinion is more aware of what went on in Czechoslovakia than of what is going on in Hainan and the mandated islands.

To recognize these differences is a good antidote to sectional preconceptions and a good way to prepare our minds for the formation of a true national policy. Such a policy must come from an understanding that though America lies between two oceans it must protect itself by one policy. Such a policy it can have only if the complacency of the inland is leavened by the awareness of the coastal regions, if the excitements of the seaboard are balanced by the sanity of the interior.

'Guaranteed Wage' Seen as Outgrowth Of Wage-Hour Law

Way Is Opened for Formal Memorandum Prepared by Counsel

Washington—(P)—Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews predicted today that wider use of "guaranteed annual wage" contracts by seasonal industries might result from the fair labor standards act.

A guaranteed annual wage contract is one under which employees are paid on an annual or semi-annual basis. Under the wage-hour act such employees cannot be required to work more than 1,000 hours in six months or more than 2,000 hours in one year.

Andrews based his prediction on a formal memorandum prepared by Calvert Magruder, general counsel for the wage-hour division, interpreting two sections of the law. The memorandum was intended to serve, Magruder said, as a guide to the administrator unless the courts direct otherwise.

Andrews indicated the guaranteed annual wage basis would become attractive to employers by giving them the right to step up production in emergencies without paying employees overtime.

He emphasized that exemption from overtime payments, however, applied only to industries whose employees worked under union contracts calling for specific wages and working periods over long terms.

Under collective bargaining agreements arrived at between a he said, "employees may be worked up to 12 hours a day and 56 hours a week without payment of overtime."

"It is apparent from the legislative history (of the section)," the memorandum said, "that by requiring the employee to be employed 'on an annual basis,' congress intended that the employee be guaranteed either a fixed annual wage or annual employment."

"It was brought to the attention of congress that an employer might, for example, guarantee his employees $30 a week for 52 weeks, or a fixed annual wage of $1,560, regardless of the number of hours an employee worked in any particular week."

"Thus an employee might work 52 hours in one week and 16 in another, yet receive $30 for each week. This plan could not be continued in effect if the employer was required to pay time and a half for the regular rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of 44 hours in the week that the employee worked 52 hours."

Three Retired Supreme Court Justices Neighbors at Capital

Washington—(P)—Three elderly jurists who saw a lot of each other as associate justices of the supreme court still can see each other as neighbors. They are:

Justice Willis Van Devanter, 79, who stepped down from the supreme court in June, 1937.

Justice George Sutherland, 76, who retired in January, 1938.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis, 82, who quit active work last week.

All three live on a quiet residential hill in Washington not a quarter of a mile from one another.

All three reside in apartments and, generally, they take life easy.

Early this spring, Justice Van Devanter will get into his modest automobile and drive 27 miles into the rolling Maryland hills to his farm at Simpsonville.

Student Leaders At Champaign Ask 'Drastic Action'

Call 'Existing Conditions Blot on Character Of Students'

Champaign, Ill.—(P)—A resolution demanding "immediate and drastic action" from state officials investigating vice conditions in Champaign county was adopted by student leaders at the University of Illinois last night as investigators hurried to Springfield for a conference with acting Governor John Stille today.

The resolution, adopted jointly by the student senate and the class council, termed "existing conditions" a "blot on the character of more than 12,000 students."

The student action followed that of the board of university trustees which met in Chicago Saturday and asked state officials to investigate conditions "in the university community."

The board was called together to consider action after William Spurrier, 20, a university sophomore student from Toledo, Ohio, was shot fatally early Thursday. Mrs. Margaret Strothers, Negro proprietor of the Fulman hotel, was charged with murder following Spurrier's death. The complaint was signed by the youth's mother. He and five other students had sought admission to the establishment after closing hours, Mrs. Strother said in a statement to Champaign police.

The university trustees, at the Saturday meeting, asked state officials to "proceed with the utmost vigor against the delinquent local officials, bringing to bear all powers under existing laws to stamp out illegal liquor traffic, gambling and other forms of vice in the university community."

T. P. Sullivan, head of the bureau of criminal identification and investigation, was ordered to Champaign Saturday by acting Governor Stille and told to prepare a report for today's conference with University President Arthur Cuts

There he dresses in gray flannel shirts, old riding pants and a weather-beaten hat. He delights in his wheat crops and hog-raising, and labors like a farmhand.

But Justice Van Devanter spent 27 years on the supreme court bench, and the fact he can't make him forget legal work entirely. Last year when he presided at a New York trial, he sighed:

"To step out of a farm and onto a bench in criminal court acts as a tonic for the spirit."

Justice Sutherland doesn't yearn for the country. He spends most of his time in the capital, seeing friends, automobile riding and walking.

Justice Brandeis now has more time for reading—one of the great passions of his life, and furthering the cause of his people, the Jews.

Brazil Offers Opportunity For U. S. Capital Investment

Washington — It was very funny when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Brazilian Foreign Minister Aranha, who is here to obtain financial help for Brazil, stood together before a battery of news cameras. The Brazilian statesman edged away slightly from the American secretary of the treasury and said: "I don't want this picture to show me with my hand in your pocket."

Brazil's canny foreign minister, who formerly served here as ambassador from Rio, revealed in this little pleasantry his keen awareness of the instinctive popular antagonism in the United States toward sending any more money abroad.

Always before his mind's eye is the specter of the Johnson act, which prohibits the lending of American money to any government which is in default on its obligations to the United States government. Brazil owes some $350,000,000 in defaulted obligations to American citizens. True, this money is not owed to the United States government and thus is not a Johnson act crime, but it is near enough to that to make the Brazilian minister slightly self-conscious when he brings up the subject of money. He knows that public

Raymond Clapper sentiment here is touchy. But another picture is coming out of the Brazilian discussions—and these discussions are of vast long-range importance, because if they produce results the ice will have been broken for general export of American capital to South America once more.

Brazil is as big as the United States, plus another Texas. Economically it is now roughly in the same relative stage of development that the United States had reached in the early 70s. After the Civil war we had about 40,000,000 people. Brazil has about the same now. We had arable land, climate, and raw materials. But little capital. That is Brazil today.

Foreign Money Helped to Build United States

What happened in the United States with its sparsely settled 40,000,000 people? Foreign capital came in. British capital particularly. Foreign money was advanced to build our railroads, steel mills, textile mills, factories, office buildings. British insurance companies moved in. King George is still supposed to own chunks of some downtown New York office buildings. Individual British investors lost some of their money, but on the whole Britishers found in America a profitable outlet for their surplus capital. Expanding activities attracted immigrants from overcrowded countries of Europe. These immigrants in turn became customers for expanding industries. Thus, with indispensable help from foreign capital, was the United States built.

Now we are offered today's Brazil as something of a parallel. We have surplus capital. Brazil provides the opportunity. Internally, her situation is good. Her budget — aside from defaulted obligations — is approximately balanced. There is little crime. But Brazil needs to build railroads — she has just purchased locomotives from Belgium because five to seven years' credit was allowed whereas American manufacturers asked spot cash. Mines need development. Brazil is the native home of the rubber tree. But British capital improved the tree, colonized it in the East Indies and took the rubber market from Brazil.

Officials Lean Toward Extending Aid to Brazil

We say it would take $200,000,000 to fortify Guam so that Japan couldn't cut off our rubber supply in the British East Indies. What would $200,000,000 do toward developing Brazilian rubber?

In discussions here, experts figure that $100,000,000, or even half that, advanced to Brazil now would start her on the road to internal expansion. Because of exchange difficulties, American firms with branches in Brazil are unable to bring their profits home. That discourages further investment there. Our officials lean strongly toward helping Brazil. This is our chance, some of them feel, to do with our surplus capital what the British did with theirs in the United States 75 years ago. If we don't do it, some other country will.

There is a desire in the administration to work out a proposition and Aranha is remaining on for several weeks. Most American officials feel that any proposal that is developed must go to congress for approval. While Brazil technically is not under the ban of the Johnson act, American government financial aid would be contrary to the spirit of the act. Hence the desire to put the matter up to congress.

Senator Fisher Returns To Legislative Session

Waupaca — Senator and Mrs. Fred R. Fisher spent the weekend at their home, coming late Friday afternoon with Colonel W. J. Holden of the Veterans' Home who had spent two days in Madison on business. The Fishers returned to the capital Monday accompanied by Fred McCrossen, a senate page, who also had spent the weekend in Waupaca with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allan McCrossen.

difficulties, American firms with branches in Brazil are unable to bring their profits home. That discourages further investment there. Our officials lean strongly toward helping Brazil. This is our chance, some of them feel, to do with our surplus capital what the British did with theirs in the United States 75 years ago. If we don't do it, some other country will.

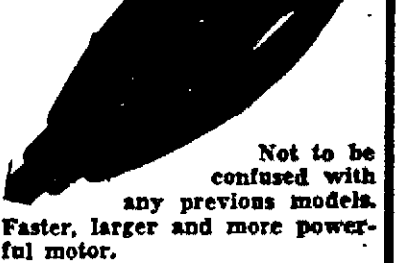

There is a desire in the administration to work out a proposition and Aranha is remaining on for several weeks. Most American officials feel that any proposal that is developed must go to congress for approval. While Brazil technically is not under the ban of the Johnson act, American government financial aid would be contrary to the spirit of the act. Hence the desire to put the matter up to congress.

"Of Course I Like ELECTRIC SHAVING"

The massaging action of electric shaving gives a comfortable sensation not possible in any other type of shaving." THAT'S THE STORY WE HEAR EVERY DAY. WHY DON'T YOU CHANGE, TOO?

Argument That Wisconsin Taxes Are Driving Wealthy Residents To Other States Still Is Live Issue

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)
Madison—The often repeated charge that Wisconsin's taxation and other governmental policies are driving business and industries from the state and into more hospitable climate is again receiving the attention of the legislature this winter.

In innumerable campaigns, office-seekers have made the charge, and defended themselves against it. Wisconsin taxes on business and manufacturing are too high, the argument goes. So rather than submit to the exorbitant levies, businessmen are leaving Wisconsin and taking their plants and capital with them. Most frequently called upon to defend himself and his administration from this accusation in recent years has been the three time governor of the state, Philip F. LaFollette.

The subject has popped up frequently in the first six weeks of the present session, notably in the dispute over the abolition of the department of commerce set up by the LaFollette administration.

Started Survey
 The department of commerce, the legislature was informed by Director William F. Ashe of Kaukauna, had launched an intensive and impartial study of Wisconsin taxation policies as compared with rival industrial states with a view to nailing the question down with facts.

When the Republican-Democratic coalition persisted in its desire to wipe out the department, Progressive charged that the present administration was alarmed lest the result of the study show that Wisconsin taxation is fair and that the cries of the LaFollette opponents about high taxes on business were unfounded.

The administration, partly in answer to this charge, consented to Ashe's suggestion that the tax study be continued, even though the department which instigated it is on its way out of existence. With an expenditure of $15,000, the director explained, the study could be finished within the next six months. The tax commission will supervise the work, with the consent of Governor Heil.

That the question still remains a live one was indicated, however, by the appearance of widespread support for a measure now in the legislature which would set up a legislative interim committee to investigate the reasons for business emigration, if such a fact is found to exist, and to suggest remedies. To be called "the industrial fact-finding commission," the group would also be empowered to try to attract new industries to Wisconsin, and to gather such pertinent material as may be available for a report to the legislature itself.

Millionaires Move
 A new wrinkle in the discussion of Wisconsin taxes and its effect on business was given a legislative committee recently when Dr. C. E. Albright of Milwaukee, one of Wisconsin's wealthiest and best-known business figures, asserted without qualification that at least 10 of his millionaire friends had deserted Wisconsin as a place to live because of excessively high income and inheritance taxes.

"They found that it costs too much to live in Wisconsin," he explained.

Most of them went to Florida, changed their legal residence, with the result that their estates will not be probated in Wisconsin and the state will lose huge chunks of inheritance taxes, he said.

Albright, who was chairman of Ashe's advisory council on the department of commerce, warned the committee that he too may leave the state if it remaining within it proves to be too expensive.

County School Boards To Meet on March 17
 The annual meeting of county school board members will be held at the Wilson Junior High school on March 17, according to Henry J. Van Straten, Outagamie county superintendent of schools. About 400 persons are expected for the meeting. J. F. Shaw, supervisor of elementary grades for the state department of public instruction, will be one of the speakers.

THE SUBJECT OF GAMBLING

At last the present legislature will give some attention to Wisconsin's ancient and foolish Blue Law prohibiting as a criminal offense every wager however trivial and irrespective of a purpose that may be only amusing.

We do not pretend that the drawing of a new measure upon this subject is as simple as writing a note. The interviews published in the Post-Crescent last week with members of the senate and assembly from hereabouts indicated not only a conflict of opinion but that the subject is involved and demands patience in its study and care in its handling.

The bill to license slot machines at a certain amount a year does not meet the issue. Slot machines were bad because they were more crooked than moderate language can express. Public opinion rose up against them because of their dishonesty and the long train of sharp practices that grew up with them.

We think the legislature should start out with the conviction that betting small change is not iniquity, and should add to that the further proposition that all over-reaching is iniquity.

Wisconsin must not forget that it has become one of the largest summer resort states of the nation. And it should take every step that is fair and reasonable to maintain that position. It need not think with all the severe competition that it will hold its place without attention to material factors.

What harm or wrong is there in permitting the summer resort country to have Keno or Bingo nights? There is hardly anything more depressing than a rainy night at a summer resort or anything more exhilarating than a game of the sort mentioned to wipe out its blight.

Because other parts of the state may not care to permit games of this sort the proposal to authorize county boards to regulate the practice has the appearance of practical value.

But let us get it out of our heads that we are going to have satisfactory conditions by embracing any extreme. The present Blue Law is just as bad as one wiping out all restraint or restrictions. The best possible law is one that recognizes the fact that all blue laws invite boot-legging, corruption and political decay, whereas regulatory laws, even though not perfect by any means, aim at and generally secure the highest degree of good conduct possible from mankind.

TIME FOR HEARINGS

The bills introduced by Chairman Woodruff of the House subcommittee dealing with relief appropriations and by Senator Byrnes in the Senate should be made at once a basis for hearings on Federal relief policy. Merely to cut the WPA appropriation is no answer to this problem. Unless by great good luck private employment picks up extraordinarily, the expenditures will go on just the same. And Congress, whenever the money runs out, will vote a deficiency appropriation. One may be quite sure of that.

Congress should make up its mind now that, if the total cost of Federal relief is to be reduced, the only way, except that of trusting irresponsibly to good luck, is to reduce the unit cost of the case load. That is, some other and cheaper form of relief must be substituted for WPA.

It is evident that a matter so controversial will not be dealt with coolly and rationally if left to be considered under the pressure of an imminent exhaustion of relief funds. If Congress intends properly to fulfill its responsibility in this matter, consideration should begin at once. The bills above-mentioned would make as good a basis as any for hearings.

INTERNATIONAL TROUBLE MAN

Mr. A. Pickus, an Ohio business man, is one of the most interesting cranks in America, and that's going some. His hobby is giving advice to the heads of governments. He does it at his own expense and their time, operating mainly by long distance telephone.

Whenever there is a big national or international crisis, Mr. Pickus may be depended on to call up the statesman in the center of the works, be it President Roosevelt or Chancellor Hitler or the Mikado, or whoever, and tell him what to do. It would be interesting to have a complete list of the great men of this generation who have had the benefit, personally or by proxy, of this helpful kibitzer's counsel.

Well, Mr. Pickus was reported lately as discarding the telephone and heading for Washington, with the admirable purpose of "convincing the President and Congress that this country should cooperate with the democracies."

pose of "convincing the President and Congress that this country should cooperate with the democracies."

The purpose is admirable, but isn't the gentleman wasting his time? It seems to the rest of us that what he asks for is already being done. He might offer his services, though, as mediator between the White House and the Senate.

BUSINESS HOPES RISE

If business leaders are slow in throwing off the mood of pessimism there is substantial reason for their attitude. They have been struggling with the forces of depression and recession for nine years. They have been sustained by the hope of finding prosperity just around the corner or just beyond the horizon. Instead they have found disappointment. It is understandable that they should be slow to respond to heartening developments. Their interests demand, however, that they recognize the processes of change so that they may avail themselves of the opportunities that these processes bring.

There are a great many evidences of improvement, and it is unfortunate that they are so little recognized by business men who are steeped in pessimism and other citizens intensely preoccupied with events abroad and matters at home that are of far less importance. The stage at present is set for recovery. The advancement of recovery should be the dominant interest and purpose of the American people.

Electric power output is up, though at this time of the year the trend is usually downward. The February monthly letter of the National City Bank, reporting that "in the United States the cumulative forces of the trade cycle should be toward recovery," mentions government spending, the good business outlook, a satisfactory retail trade prospect and favorable reports from the automobile industry as among the "stimulating factors."

Government spending cannot, of course, bring prosperity, but if business activity gains and government spending is reduced, the outlook will indeed be rosy.

A DISTINGUISHED REFUGEE

One of the consequences of tyranny abroad has been the intellectual enrichment of those lands that have served as places of refuge for scholars, scientists and religious leaders who, for racial or other reasons, have been compelled to leave totalitarian states. The United States has enjoyed its fair share of the benefits of the exodus of enlightened leaders of thought from the dark corners of Europe.

Among the refugees in the United States today are two former heads of European nations, former Chancellor Bruening of Germany, and Eduard Benes, who, until the tragedy of Munich, was the president of Czechoslovakia, and who arrived in New York the other day.

Eduard Benes is a weary, disillusioned little man upon whose shoulders rests the burden of a great drama, who has taken part in the fashioning of a nation, and who has sat with hands tied while that nation was betrayed and dismembered. Now he is an exile, his life work broken, separated, perhaps forever, from the land which he loved and served so well, often at the risk of his life.

At least, however, he is among friends, people who admire him for his lofty character, his patriotism and his ideals of democracy. He is welcome here, and he has much to give in the way of inspiration at a time when democracy's enemies, emboldened by the spectacular successes of the past, are riding high.

SOUTH DAKOTA LEADS

South Dakota has taken the lead in officially recognizing the birthday of Thomas A. Edison. By proclamation of Governor Harlan J. Bushfield the anniversary of the great inventor's birth was officially designated Thomas Alva Edison Day. Said the governor:

Among great Americans the name of Thomas Alva Edison ranks high. The beneficent effect of his work is enjoyed by all civilized peoples. Enterprises have arisen because of his discoveries and inventions and have created great markets for commodities, but more important, many jobs have been created. His contributions to industry have done much to make this nation the leader of the world, particularly in the harnessing of electric energy. His contributions to human happiness are manifest. This is an era when the lives of great Americans should be stressed and we are happy to honor this man among the great of all times."

Perhaps Edison lived too recently to have his works really appreciated by the people of the world whose benefactor he was. As time passes Edison's memory will occupy a constantly expanding niche in history, and credit is due Governor Bushfield and South Dakota for speeding the day.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

THE DOG BARKS

The gale is tearing at the house. . . The door is slamming. . . He can never be resigned To all this havoc. . . Crouching on the floor, My dog barks at the wind.

Here is one enemy that will not go. Until he pleases, though dogs bark all night, Outside the wind is dancing with the snow, Whirling with mad delight.

My dog subsides. . . So futile his assault! Against Fate's waters he cannot keep. Forever at it. . . Certain the worlds at fault, He goes to sleep.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—The charming feature of these Monday chapters out of Harrison's lurid past is that they only come once a week.

One of my editors (I have several. You'd think I couldn't spell and didn't know anything, the way they pile editors on me) spoke to me just yesterday about it. "Dale," he said, "do you think there is any crying demand among your readers for the story of your adolescence?" "Sir," I replied, "I am flattered even that you should admit I have any readers. In answer to your interrogation I can only say that I have been asked by many people to give them an inkling of my youth, and that I am bounden to acquiesce. I do not pretend that my childhood history should be required reading in elementary schools. It is what I like to think of as light reading."

"Very," murmured the editor. "Your interpolation of the adverb, 'I' shouted, 'leads me to suspect that you are not moved by accounts of the struggles and discouragements which I, as an American boy, had to meet and vanquish in order to arrive at maturity with some semblance of solvency. In view of your indifference to my youth, I shall now tell you the time I rose to heroic heights and saved a dame from a watery grave.'"

I was sweet on a Chicago girl, age 14, who used to spend the summers in Paw Paw. Her folks had a cottage out at Pugsley's Lake. I think I was about 13. Later, when I was 20, I gave considerable thought to marrying her, but nothing came of it. She did not seem to share my matrimonial enthusiasm. I understand she eventually married a milkman and was very unhappy.

Even if I didn't marry her, I at least had a small part in seeing that she grew up, because one night she fell into the lake; and when you fall into the lake and can't swim, anything can happen.

I was cavaliereing her home after an ice cream soda orgy (one soda each, to be specific). Her cottage was across the lake, and the procedure required that I row her over. This labor was very disagreeable, as I was a puny youth to whom all forms of manual labor were anathema. If I had not been in love I am sure I would have recommended that she do her own rowing. As a lad, you will see, I was considerable of a heel. (What do you mean, Harrison, "as a lad?"—Editor).

The boat was pulled up on the beach, but there was a pier nearby. I told her to go out to the end of the pier and I would row around and she could get aboard there. (I don't remember why I did this I probably figured I would get a chance to hold her hand as she stepped gingerly into the craft, and that if I wobbled the boat a little she might use it as an excuse to throw her arms around my neck in mock fright. There are girls, I believe, who even to this day resort to such artifices.)

"Walk right out on the pier," I said airily, "and I shall be there immediately."

I forgot to mention that this girl was kinda dumb. She walked out to the end of the pier, and kept right on walking. I was busy launching the rowboat. I heard a splash and a bit of glub-glub, but I did not realize anything was amiss. I forgot to mention that I was kinda dumb, too.

By this time I was in the boat and I rowed to the end of the pier. Imagine my embarrassment when I saw that my Love was not standing there at all. She was floundering about, making a great to-do, awakening all the shore boys and blue-gills.

"I can't swim!" my Love cried. "That makes it doubly embarrassing," I shouted. "I can't swim, either!"

I had some vague notion that I should extend an oar to her. As I did so, I noticed that the oar touched bottom; that the lake at this point was only about two feet deep. Immediately I made up my mind. I'd save her! I jumped in, fully clad. I splashed with the gusto of a river boat paddle wheel. I seized her. I lugged her to the boat and put her safely in. I then dragged myself aboard.

"Save—save—me!" she murmured. Who was I to start an argument?

When we got to her cottage she told her mother I was her hero. She even kissed me, I believe.

Eight years later she married the milkman. (Copyright, 1939)

Looking Backward

25 YEARS AGO

Monday, Feb. 23, 1914

Chief George P. McGillan and Assistant Chief John Conroy were able to leave the hospital to which they were taken after being overcome in a fire which damaged the Fox River Paper company's plant the previous week.

Two carloads of Holstein cattle purchased in Onagame county had been shipped to Nebraska to stock dairy farms.

Fire destroyed an electric automobile owned by H. G. Freeman.

10 YEARS AGO

Monday, Feb. 18, 1929

The Valley Scout council started a three day campaign to raise $6,500 to finance its work for the year.

The Civic council was to meet that evening to plan a survey of crippled children in the county.

The mercury dropped to 11 below zero that morning and the whole state was in the grip of a "cold wave."

Seymour Gmeiner was reelected president of Butte des Morts golf club at the annual meeting the previous evening.

HOLDING OUT INVENTIONS

A new vacuum tube, better and more durable than any radio tube now in use, was patented by Bell Telephone Laboratories, Incorporated, as long ago as 1923, according to testimony given the National Economic committee. The Bell company has a cross-licensing agreement with both Radio Corporation of America and General Electric Corporation. Under it either or both of them could make use of this invention. They have failed for 15 years to do so, because it was frankly admitted by the president of the former company, the sale of a longer-lived tube would be "to their commercial advantage."

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—More than ever before in peace time the government is going after bright young men from the colleges to fill its fighting planes and laboratories.

The Government is expanding its pursuit of the arts of war side by side with its pursuit of the arts of peace. To man the 3,000 new planes the air corps expects to buy during the next two years will require not only 25,000 extra enlisted men from outside the colleges, but 2,000 more officers, most of them college men.

At the same time the Department of Agriculture is reaching out for 1,100 bright young college men. It wants to get that many probably within the next year to begin hunting in four new laboratories for new uses to which surplus cotton, corn, wheat or potatoes can be put. They also will seek uses for crops which can replace those of which we now have too much.

The selection plan has not been worked out but it probably will be something akin to the system which the big technical industries, such as General Electric, General Motors and Chrysler motors use in searching out expert help. These companies take selected students fresh from the campus and give them jobs in the company plants to learn the business.

Fliers A Problem
Most complicated is the method of selecting Army fliers. The Army couldn't absorb 2,000 new fliers all at once even if it could train them. It would put a disastrous "bump" in the promotion system to take in so many all at once. Many would serve for years without a promotion, as would all those coming in after them.

Instead the immediate requirements will be filled by bringing in from the private air schools reserve officers, flying cadets and newly trained fliers who will serve only three to seven years. Each year for the next 10 years 200 to 300 will be selected from this list for permanent commissions in the air force.

But the immediate prospect is for 3,000 air corps reserve officers to be offered active duty for three to seven years, an increase from 1,250 such jobs during recent years. If at the end of three years they are not chosen for permanent commissions, they may retire, trained fliers, with a $500 bonus.

Of course if war comes, they'll be on the spot.

Sights in the Capital

Off Pennsylvania Avenue:
Since Senator Copeland of the red carnation died, a half dozen senators have taken to wearing red carnations. The old senator had a monopoly on them until he dropped off last year. . . Mrs. Mary Borah, wife of the senator, wears a ring with a smoky topaz the size of a plum. "Nobody respectable would wear it," says she, mischievously. It once belonged to Machado, exiled dictator from Cuba. . . Fifty steps from the U. S. treasury you can buy a book entitled: "Your Income Tax, How to Keep It Low."

. . . In Washington, home of the New Deal, only five "Telephone Deal" nametags are in the telephone book—new Deal barber shop, liquor store, two clothes shops and a paper hanger.

SOCIALIZED MEDICINE

Editor Post-Crescent—Why should we have so little pride in our country, and so great admiration for Russia, Germany, and other so-called social-minded nations. It has never been explained to me how we became the greatest and richest nation in the world by doing everything wrong.

Yet United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis, in the warm glow of his great heart, is going about bragging good with other people's money. He is bragging and saying that the federal government is going to place the doctor in a position of complete obedience to Washington D. C.

Contrarywise it is my belief that the destruction of principle will mean a lower standard of living in America as we have seen abroad.

Where politicians own business business must serve their own political ends. You want to select your own physician rather than have a centralized political machine act for you. We want recovery and prosperity bringing for all willing workers and chance to spend your own money instead of having government tax and spend it for you.

Trouts Get Into Hot Water on Expedition

Casper, Wyo.—Thirty-seven large trout recently were found, scalded to death, in the boiling waters of hot springs near Alcovia dam.

Deputy Sheriff James Derrington, who investigated, said the trout apparently swam upstream from their usual haunts. He was unable to determine why they swam into the hot water.

"They must have been warned before the water became hot enough to kill them," Derrington said.

THERE! DOES THAT MAKE OUR POSITION PERFECTLY CLEAR?

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—The orphan of Wisconsin politics, the Democratic party, continues to furnish interesting news, despite its numerically unimportant position in state affairs just now.

When Democratic leaders at Fond du Lac conference a few weeks ago laid plans—at a closed meeting—for a reorganization campaign, veteran observers merely looked bored.

Now comes an authoritative report that Mr. Farley has assured some of the movers of the Fond du Lac meeting in person that he is behind their efforts. Compare that with Chairman Carroll's assurances that Farley is working with him, and the fact that Carroll's opponents were responsible for the Fond du Lac conclave. Yes, it is all a little hard to understand.

Here is what is definitely apparent, however National headquarters is busily planning for 1940 and the convention, and is aware that whatever their voting support at election time, the Wisconsin Democrats can bring a handy bloc of delegates to the convention hall. At least encouragement at Washington has gone far enough to allow some of the state organizers to collect funds from Wisconsin job-holders in the federal government.

LEGISLATURE
Meanwhile, however, the situation in the legislature concerns some of the Democratic chieftains who believe Roosevelt is their party leader.

They are still insisting that the Democrats who have joined the Coalition with the administration in the legislature cast off their voluntary chains and stand for an independent program. Whether they will make any progress ought to be apparent soon, for the session is now well-underway.

In all of the current negotiations in the party Mrs. George Givan of Milwaukee, Democratic national committeewoman from Wisconsin, is taking a leading part, supposedly due, in part at least, to the candidacy of Mr. McNutt for the presidency.

Coincidentally comes some evidence from within the capitol itself that the Coalition is not as harmonious as it may seem from the outside. Progressives are helping assiduously to spread this impression. While the situation is not as precarious as they would have you believe, there is some quiet resentment among the majority Republicans against the self-imposed leadership of Senator Harry Bolens, the Democrat.

There is a little surmising from the galleries to see a Democrat assuming the leadership in what is on the record a Republican legislature. It nettles, how deeply cannot yet be ascertained, to have the Progressives dub him "Governor Bolens," when the latter got only 78,000 votes and Julius Heil sits in the executive chair.

POT-POURRI
Not overly, but none the less effectively, the state university's 90,000 alumni are having the Heil administration's cut of a cool million from the university's budget explained to them. . . Into the mails last week went a dressed-up edition of the LaFollette house organ, THE PROGRESSIVE, to give the "truth" to the people about the winter's happenings in the statehouse. . . While other governors received the press regularly, Julius Heil has had only one press conference so far during his term, and that one very

High-Low Play Indicates an 'Echo' in Suit

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Almost all players are familiar with the signal known as a "high-low" or "echo." Usually this valuable device, consisting of a discard or follow suit play of a high card followed by a lower card, shows that the defender holds exactly two of the suit or that he wants that suit to be continued for reasons of his own. Thus, in almost every case, when a defender "echoes" he is asking his partner to lead that suit. There are, however, important exceptions to this general rule. One of them concerns the trump echo. It often is vital for one defender to know just how many trumps his partner originally had. This knowledge can be transmitted by a proper sequence of plays. Consider today's hand:

West dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

♥ K 7 5
♦ K 9 7
♣ K 7 6 5

EAST
♠ A K 4 3 2
♥ Q 8
♦ J
♣ J 10 9 4

WEST EAST
♠ 10 8 6 5 ♠ A K 4 3 2
♥ 3 2 ♥ Q 8
♦ A 8 6 5 4 2 ♦ J
♣ 8 ♣ J 10 9 4

South the bidding:
West North East South
Pass Pass 1 spade 2 hearts
Pass Pass Pass Pass

South's two heart overcall, although a strong bid when vulnerable, did not quite represent the trick-taking power of his hand. He might have been better advised to have doubled for a take-out (even with shaded values) with the intention of showing his heart suit if North responded with diamonds or clubs. Actually there was a very fair play for a heart game in the combined hands, but North was not sufficiently spurred by the two heart overcall to make a try for game.

West, holding four of his partner's spades, saw no reason to lead that suit. The singleton club appeared much more attractive. That this selection had an unfortunate result was just hard luck as far as West was concerned and was due to the fact that his partner was astray in the subsequent defense.

Declarer captured East's club nine with the ace and laid down the heart ace. The heart jack then was led through West. If, at this point, declarer had operated on the principle that a finesse against the queen is not in order when holding nine cards of the suit, the rest of the play would have become automatic, and East never would have had a chance to go astray. But, apparently, declarer read West's opening lead as a singleton and jumped to the conclusion that West therefore must be fairly long in hearts. It is a fact that if a singleton in one suit can be located in a player's hand, the percentages there are greatly against his holding a doubleton in another suit unless, of course, his bidding has indicated ten cards in the other two suits.

Thus there was no great criticism to be attached to declarer's heart finesse, but it gave East an opportunity which (unfortunately) he failed to grasp. West had played the heart deuce on the ace and the three spot on the next lead. If he had held three hearts he would have informed his partner of that fact by playing first the three spot and then the deuce. This is the trump echo to which I referred above. Contrary to the general rule, when following suit in trumps a defender shows three, not two, by playing high-low (echoing).

East overlooked the fact that his partner had not echoed in trumps and, after catching one top spade, returned a club in the hope that West would ruff. Obviously West could do no such thing, having no trumps left. Declarer won with the club queen, crossed to dummy's club king, and ruffed a club, thereby establishing dummy's fifth club. He reentered dummy with the heart king and discarded his remaining spade on the established club, then ruffed a spade back to his own hand and played up the diamond king.

The defenders lost one of their spade tricks and, by so doing, had to take a very bad match-point score on the board, inasmuch as no North-South team actually reached game.

Swim Suits Like Evening Dresses

Many of the swim suits for southern surfers are so "soft" in design, they suggest abbreviated evening dresses. This one of royal blue acetate jersey is fashioned with a shirred top and tucked skirt. It goes to the beach with dark sun-glasses and a striped rubber play-ball.

Self-Pitying Women Usually Have Everything for Happiness

BY DOROTHY DIX

Did you ever think that about nine-tenths of all the unhappiness in the world is home-grown and raised on the premises? I don't mean the kind of unhappiness that is the result of remorse for some wrong we have done or some crime that has been committed against us. I mean the kind of fretful discontent, which is self-made, with which we poison life and that comes from our failure to make the best of now and here and enjoy the things we have.

For instance, to this column come hundreds of letters from despairing, miserable women who find life tedious, ashes and dust, with no avenue in it for no apparent reason than that is just the way they find life.

According to their own accounts they are sitting pretty on the top of the world. They are young and healthy. They have nice homes and a comfortable living. They have good, kind husbands and fine children. They have friends and cars, bridge clubs and a movie theater on the next corner, but they loathe housework. Their husbands bore them. Their children are a burden. Their friends are tiresome. They have no interest in anything and there is no balm in Gilead. And, oh dear, oh, dear me, they wail, is this life?

I always feel like answering these melancholy ladies by saying: Yes, this is life, only a lot better than most people get it. Life isn't all beer and skittles for anybody. Nobody gets just what they want in precisely the way they want it. There is always a fly in the omelette. There is always a lot of hard sledding somewhere on the road.

And, anyway, happiness doesn't come from without. And it isn't to be found in material things. It is a flame that burns in a dauntless soul and that no outward happenings can quench. You might have all the riches in the world and yet be miserable. Or you might be happy without a penny in your pocket. It is what is in you.

We get out of life only what we put into it. If we find it stale, flat and unprofitable it is because we have no enthusiasm, no imagination, no cheer, no sense of humor into living. Work is a chore or the most exacting of all games, as we make it. People are dull and boring or interesting, just as we come to know them. Every little village, every household is full of romance and drama, if we have the perception to sense them. There is no excuse for boredom except stupidity.

Many of these self-pitying women put on sackcloth and ashes over their crepe trousers because they have to do housework. Forever cooking, cleaning, scrubbing, picking up after a family. They go about their work with a heavy heart, as if they were in a prison. Yet what a kind they could get out of it if they would only see that making a home is the finest job to which any woman can set her hand and the most useful career she can follow.

And there are the children who get on so many mothers' nerves and cause them to regard themselves as martyrs. They are so much trouble. They are so noisy. They track in so much dirt. They tie a mother down so. There is nothing more pitiful in the world than to see a mother who is watching the wonder of a little child get out of her children when they are little, for she is losing something rare and sacred and beautiful that will never come to her again.

She is getting no thrill out of the feel of a baby's head on her breast, no sweetness out of little hands clinging to her. She finds no interest in watching the wonder of a little child unfold. Life gives us all plenty much the same raw materials for happiness, but we have to roll our own.

'Shame' Is Not Good Word to Employ in Guiding Children

BY ANGELO PATRI

Shame! Shame! Everybody knows your name. Billy Saunders! O, Billy Saunders! Billy was the girl's name. Mother went to the window and looked out. Yes, it was true again. There was Billy, aged ten, happily hopping with three girls his own age. "Why does he do it?" groaned mother.

"Plain silly, I ought to wallop him well for it," said father that evening. "Wouldn't do a bit of good. The boys and girls have shamed him for it, but it runs off him like water off a duck. He played on the team yesterday, and today he played hopscotch with the girls next door. He's as set as a mule about it."

The teacher told the boy's mother that there was nothing to worry about. "He is a very independent chap. The minute somebody tries to force him one way or another he demonstrates that he is his own master. That's all there is to this girl-playing. He found it got a rise out of the other boys and he goes to show them that he can play on the team or not, just as he feels like it."

"What are you going to do about him?" "I'm going to see if we can't get him so interested in the team that he will learn his duty in team work. That is what is most important. He has to shoulder his share of responsibility for the team along with the others. His girl-playing is just a gesture. If we take note of it he will stick to his team duties."

There are feminine traits in every boy and masculine traits in every girl. The trouble begins when the opposing traits are dominant—that is, when the feminine traits in the boy are stronger than the masculine ones. When a boy goes girlish and a girl goes boyish, and plainly indicates an inability to do either wisely, it is time to call for help. Such children are likely to have imbalanced glands, and medical care will help them.

Don't cry. Shame, shame, to any child, especially such children. That treatment is likely to make a bad matter worse by adding mental depression to the already too overburdened mind. The child who is suffering from unbalanced glands is not any too comfortable as it is and to add mental suffering to his state is cruelty. It cannot possibly help and it most assuredly hinders.

In early age the boy and girl children play together. Soon they show different attitudes toward the game. The little girls become mamas and the little boys, papas. In the house games, the little boys are soldiers and the little girls are the Red Cross nurses. It is about then one detects the first signs of difficulty if there is any. Begin then to help the child get over the handicap. Don't, if you value the child's mental and physical health, allow the word Shame to pass your lips.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to children's problems from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Letters and readers' names are never published.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Into my hands has fallen a charming little English book by Jane Gordon who writes so convincingly about the merits of egg yolk rinses and shampoos that I shall quote her exactly.

"If you want to keep your hair particularly soft and shiny, or if you are a blonde, a yolk of egg rinse added to a thorough bland soap shampoo, is the best way of keeping your hair light."

You lightly beat up the yolk only, of one strictly fresh egg, into a large cup of water, and after the last rinsing with cool water in your regular shampoo, the yolk of egg mixture is poured over the hair and rubbed in well in the same way as the soap would be. It is then rinsed out thoroughly, ending with a distilled-water rinsing.

Shampoo for Hair
A course of yolk of egg shampoos is extraordinarily good for hair that is looking faded or has suddenly for no apparent reason started to fall unduly. Six shampoos are needed.

You start with the ordinary shampoo of bland liquid soap, followed by the egg rinse described above.

Three days afterwards you give yourself a yolk of egg shampoo without soap. The yolks only of two fresh eggs are beaten in a large cupful of water. The hair is parted and the egg brushed into the parting, using a long handled nail brush dipped into the egg mixture.

The hair is then parted an inch further up and the brushing repeated, until the entire scalp has been covered. The yolk of another egg lightly beaten in a large cup of water is poured over the head and massaged in thoroughly, the hair being then rinsed with five or six rinsings of water, ending up with a cool or cold rinse. The hair is then partly dried with a towel, massaged for five minutes and brushed dry.

This shampoo is repeated twice a week until six egg shampoos have been given. They are particularly good for the hair because they clean the scalp without drying the hair, which soap is bound to do to a certain extent.

Eggs are nature's gift to hair beauty. They contain the nourishment your scalp and hair needs.

Egg Shampoo
The rinse and shampoo described above are excellent for tender heads of children. Although the egg yolk rinse is particularly good for blonde hair it is also good, for darker hair.

Of course finger massage of the scalp, and daily brushings are required between shampoos to keep the hair healthy, lustrous and truly.

"Treatment for the Oily Scalp" is a leaflet you may have. Write to me care of this paper. A self-addressed, 3-cent stamped envelope must accompany your request, otherwise the leaflet cannot be sent to you.

SUGGESTION ABOUT PRONUNCIATION

Dear Mrs. Post: How do you pronounce "often"? The Standard Dictionary shows "offen" and I myself have always said "offen." I listened to a lecturer who pronounced the "t" and as she is a very well-known person, I thought there might be some disagreement on this word between best social usage and the dictionary.
Answer: Nearly all fashionable New Yorkers and in fact many people from other states, sound the "t" in "often." From the standpoint of social usage, therefore, the sound "offen" is considered quite as correct as the omitted one.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Geraldine is involved in a "triangle" love affair which causes unhappiness and divorce, yet rarely gets into the newspapers. Every parent should study today's case very carefully in order to avoid the same pitfall.

CASE M-155: Geraldine Q., aged 21, is the only child of wealthy parents. "I am engaged to a fine young man," she announced proudly, "but now that we have planned to get married next month, my parents are doing everything in the world to stop us."

"They were very much in favor of my fiancé when we first started going together, but when he decided to become a clergyman and entered the theological school, my father said he'd never consent to our marriage."

"Father says there's no money in the ministry, and he absolutely will not permit me to marry a preacher. He has threatened to disown me, and mother sides with him. They have already cut off my allowance, and are trying to get the police to help prevent the marriage."

"Dr. Crane, I am so upset, I don't know what to do. I love my sweetheart and want to marry him, but I have always expected my parents to be at my wedding, and they absolutely refuse to come. What should I do?"

DIAGNOSIS:
It is inhumane to torture any prospective bride in this fashion. No dominating parent should try to compel his daughter to select a husband on the basis of the young man's occupation.

Geraldine's father is a successful business man. But that doesn't mean she must marry another business man. If she happens to fall in love with a dentist, a school teacher or a clergyman, and all other signs point to a happy married life, then it is inexcusable for any parent to act like Geraldine's father.

Perhaps many of you readers will think this is a unique case in civilized America, or that it belongs in the melodrama category. But I receive scores of such cases from every large community where this column is running.

Finally, Maturity:
Geraldine's father is an educated man. He holds a college degree. He is a business success, and is certainly mature in his physical development and chronological age.

But emotionally he is still a selfish kindergarten. Despite our scientific and educational program during the past few centuries, we have made little advancement in our emotional growth. Thousands of adults are still childish and juvenile in many of their actions. Geraldine's father is simply jealous of her fiancé. Having been the big, dominant male in her life for 21 years, he refuses to give up first place in her affections.

His objection regarding the clergy is simply a smoke screen. He would have objected to any man, regardless of the latter's business or profession.

Jealous Parents
Geraldine told me that her father was always glad to see her have many boy friends and many dates. PROVIDED she didn't go with one man more than a few times.

He realized that many suitors meant she was seriously considering her affection on any one man. So papa knew he was still her chief sweetheart.

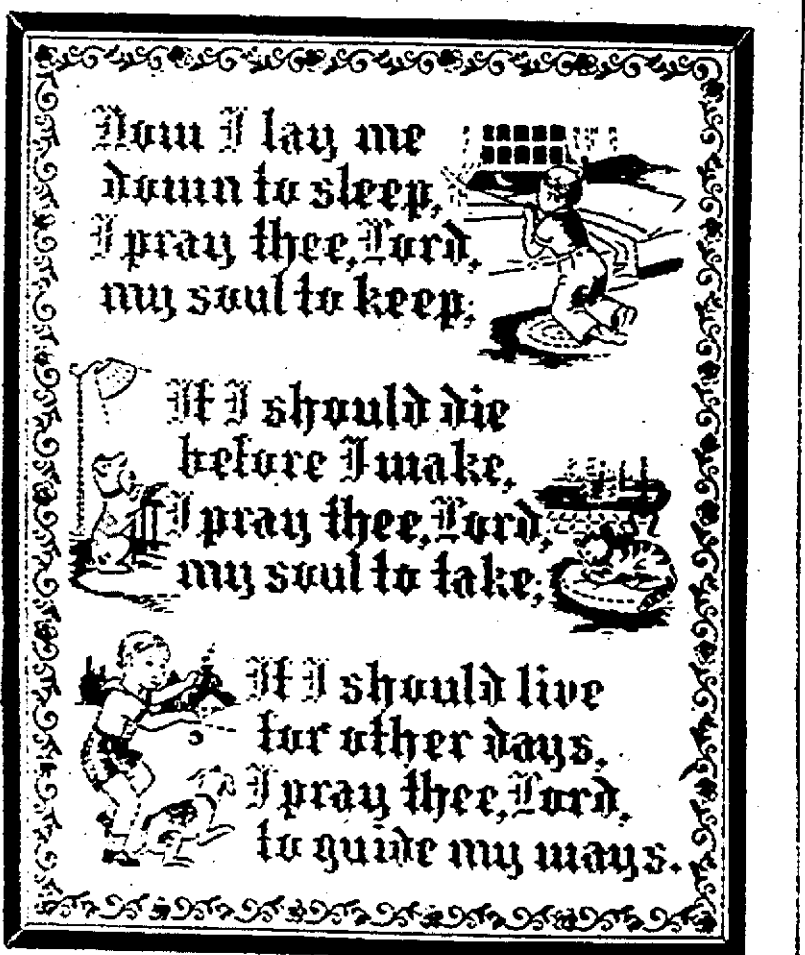

Now that she has become engaged, he is raging with typical childish jealousy. He is like a youngster who suddenly receives a new baby brother or sister without any previous warning, and finds his parents giving the major portion of their time to the newcomer. The youngster may be bitterly jealous. So is Geraldine's fatherly jealousy.

I advised her to write a tactful letter to her father, complimenting his virtues and showing him she still loved him, but to go ahead and marry, regardless.

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to children's problems from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Letters and readers' names are never published.

Thursday, and debate would begin Friday on the annual treasury-post office appropriation bill.

Three Florida Democrats—Senator Andrews and Representatives Peterson and Cannon—testified before the house ways and means committee in behalf of the Townsend old age pension bill.

Pensions based on the Townsend idea, they declared, would provide for old people, open new jobs for younger ones, and help prevent juvenile crimes by keeping children in school.

National defense was still the big topic in Washington, although debate was not as keen as it had been. Administration senators found support from some Republican members in the contention that further dispute at this time should be avoided if possible.

Senator Austin (R-Vt.), declaring his party viewpoint was secondary to his patriotism, said a committee inquiry had convinced him that the administration's encouragement of French warplane purchases was not unneutral.

Support President Austin said he believed the transaction, center of the foreign policy dispute, "tended to promote our capacity to produce airplanes needed under the armaments program."

Senator Logan (D-Ky.), concurring in his opinion, asserting that President Roosevelt did right in helping the French buy Douglas bombers manufactured for American army competition but not yet tested by the army.

Senator Minton (D-Ind.) added: "If everyone knew what the senate military committee knows, there would not be a person in the country who would criticize the president."

A proposal that the government construct a $10,000,000 aircraft manufacturing plant in or near Chicago was made by Chairman Sabbath (D-Ill.) of the house rules committee. He contended that existing private plants are inadequate to meet foreign and domestic orders.

Taxes Due Mar. 1, Treasurer Warns Property Owners

Taxpayers May Extend 50 Per Cent of Bill to July 31

The city treasurer's office will be open from 7 o'clock to 8:30 tonight and again next Monday evening to give property owners a chance to pay their real estate and personal property taxes before March 1, the deadline.

The law which permitted cities to extend the time for the payment of taxes to July 1 on affidavit expired with the tax collection two years ago, according to Joseph A. Kox, city treasurer. However, there is a bill pending in the state legislature to re-enact the law.

Taxes not paid, or extended under the city ordinance permitting extension of 50 per cent of real estate taxes will be declared delinquent and turned over to the county treasurer for collection, the treasurer said.

Many property owners have taken advantage of the city's offer to extend the payment of half their taxes and March 1 will be the last opportunity offered to those who haven't paid. If half the taxes are extended, an interest charge of 1 per cent will be collected on the extended amount which must be paid during the month of July or before.

Taxes declared delinquent on March 1 will accumulate interest at the rate of 3 per cent from Jan. 1, 1939, to the time of payment. Extended taxes not paid before July 31 will bear the same rate of interest.

Mill Must Build Treatment Plant

Interlake Ordered to Take Care of Sulphate Acid
Waste Materials

Madison (Wisc.)—Adolph Kanneberg, chairman of the state committee on water pollution, announced today the committee and the state board of health have ordered the Consolidated Water Power and Paper company to stop discharging sludge and waste materials from the sulphate acid storage tanks at its Interlake plant into the Fox river.

The company also was ordered to construct a waste sulphate liquor treatment plant as soon as a practical method of treatment is available, Kanneberg said.

The orders, he added, resulted from an investigation into the cause of death of great numbers of fish in the river at Appleton on Sept. 15 and 16, 1937. It was found that on Sept. 15 the Interlake mill cleaned the sludge from one of its acid storage tanks, and flushed it into the river.

The committee, after testing samples of river water taken that day, attributed the loss of fish to poisoning. Experiments at the University of Wisconsin on the toxic effects of acid sludge from sulphate pulp mill confirmed the committee's theory, Kanneberg said.

C. K. Boyer, manager of the Interlake Pulp and Paper company, said today the company had not discharged the storage tanks into the river since the board of health hearings more than a year ago. His company has not decided how it will take care of its waste materials, he said.

Franco Reported Forming Cabinet

quarters last night when Franco's delegates ruled that only unconditional surrender of republican Spain or final victory for nationalist arms could end the civil war.

The French mission had been instructed to seek a promise of leniency toward the Republican side as well as assurances that Spain would be rid of Italian and German forces as a basis of the recognition of Franco which it hoped would bring peace.

Senator Leon Berard, French emissary to nationalist Spain, decided to go to San Sebastian today and cross the frontier into France later to confer with Sir Robert M. Hodgson, British commercial agent in nationalist Spain, and ask fresh instructions from Paris.

Berard arrived Saturday night in Burgos. Sir Robert saw the nationalist foreign minister, Count Francisco Gomez Jordana, in Burgos and left immediately for the French frontier where he was believed to have made a long report to London by telephone. Meanwhile, Berard negotiated with nationalist officials in what seemed to be a regular schedule of talks, arranged with his British colleague.

The foreign minister was reported to have gone to Barcelona to consult Franco. Advances said there would be no further talks at Burgos before Wednesday.

Then, diplomatic sources said, new efforts probably would be made by both French and British statesmen to win some concession from Franco which would facilitate republican surrender.

Officially, optimism was still expressed that Berard's mission would succeed and Premier Eduard Daladier's cabinet would be able to proceed to formal recognition of Franco.

The principal French condition to the establishment of diplomatic relations, the pledge that post-war Spain be independent, was believed to have been satisfied by the nationalists.

Neenah Council Invites Head Of Disposal Plant to Report On Industrial Waste Problem

Neenah — Pollution of the Fox river and Little Lake Butte des Morts by sewerage from the paper mills again was discussed by members of the city council at a meeting Saturday night at the city hall, and upon the request of Alderman John Heigl, the council extended an invitation to J. M. Holdorby, superintendent of the Neenah-Menasha disposal plant to appear at the next meeting and explain the situation as it exists today.

Alderman Robert Martens received the invitation. He explained that although he had discussed it at the preceding meeting, he hadn't received newspaper publicity. He reported that Twin City sportsmen were complaining that sewerage from the mills was killing the fish in the lake. Then Alderman Heigl said he wanted a survey conducted and a report on it as to the mills which weren't connected with the disposal plant.

Mayor Edwin A. Kalfas suggested that instead of a report, the council invite the superintendent to the next meeting. Alderman Andrew Andersen stated that if the paper mills don't take action soon to shift their sewerage into the disposal plant, "the city would." He pointed out that the city was guilty of the same thing, the Lincoln street sewer emptying into the river, but he explained that the city will change it as soon as it is possible. High water last summer prevented the change.

Fills Vacancies

Mayor Kalfas reapointed three men to city boards. Carlton R. Smith was reapointed to the park board of commissioners, and Oscar C. Blank and Henry C. Haase were reapointed to the board of appeals. The council concurred on the appointments.

The city council will hold a public hearing on the matter of amending the zoning ordinance to include the southwest corner of Winnebago avenue and S. Commercial street in the local business district. At the preceding meeting, a petition requesting the amendment was submitted to the council, but the delay in action on the matter, and Saturday night a remonstrance opposing the proposed amendment was submitted.

It is said that a Neenah man is planning to erect a gas station on the corner providing, of course, that the amendment is made. Alderman Andersen pointed out that the remonstrance was signed by abutting property owners, while the petition was signed by persons living in another part of the city. He said that the former should have the decision as to whether the amendment should go through.

Mayor Kalfas agreed with him, saying that he wouldn't approve of having persons living in another section of the city determining what was better for the section in which he lived.

Sees Advantage

Alderman Heigl pointed out, explaining, however, that he wasn't necessarily in favor of the amendment, that the property in question was a likely lot for a residence because it cost too much for the diversion of sewerage, while the gas station would be less unsightly than the present structure.

Resolutions for the installation of three sewers were adopted by the council, the sewers to be installed on McKinley street, Hanrahan street and Van street. Alderman Emil Harder, chairman of the finance committee, reported that last month the city incurred 104 counts amounting to $5,427.56. The largest bill was $469.55 for sewer pipe.

The council voted to purchase 2-115 feet c. 15-inch sewer pipe and 60 feet from the Home Fuel company, the lowest bidder, at a cost of $1,355.81. Coal for the city hall will be purchased from the Nixon Fuel company, the lowest bidder, at a cost of $7.65 a ton, the council decided.

The project of collecting ashes, referred to Alderman Carl Loehning's street committee. Heigl suggested that the ashes be collected by the city trucks in the spring. He said that the city could maintain an account of the cost as a trial this year.

Would Need Truck

Alderman Loehning pointed out that another truck would have to be purchased if the city collected the ashes, and he contended that it would be better to make the collections throughout the winter explaining that people wouldn't have containers in which to hold a year's output of ashes.

Alderman Loehning informed the

What's New at the Library

Five new plays arrived at Appleton Public library last week and will be ready for circulation within a few days. One is the current success, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" by Robert E. Sherwood, which has been making theater history since its opening night when it enjoyed immediate success, with Raymond Massey in the title role.

"Oscar Wilde" by Leslie and Sewell Stokes is a play about the English writer which was first produced in America at the Fulton theater last October. Richard Watts, Jr. drama critic for the New York Herald Tribune, said of it, "the wildest play in town, and by telling his ugly story with taste and honesty it emerges as a curiously enthralling work. It was acclaimed by other critics."

Clifford Odets' play, "Rocket to the Moon" was first presented by the Group Theater at the Belasco theater Nov. 25, 1938. Richard Lockridge of the New York Sun called it the most absorbing drama of the season, and Burns Mantle, whose choice of the best plays of each season are published in book form each year, said "Mr. Odets has written with his fine feeling for human frailties and his artist's skill in depicting and analyzing character. His people live and glow with all the colors of the human spectrum."

Not a new play but having a revival with the appearance of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne is "The Sea Gull" by Anton Chekov, translated by Stark Young, Russian writer, in 1895. The Lunt production opened in New York last March, and is one of the notable successes in the American theater in recent years. Young's translation has been called the most understandable translation of the classic now available.

Elmer L. Rice, from whose pen came the popular "Street Scene" is the author of a new work entitled "American Landscape." Through a New England family and its forebears and the people who cluster around it in a little Connecticut town, Rice pictures all America. The family is one of captains, its men have led companies in all America's wars, and some have died in them. On Decoration day the dead of the family return to the living to give counsel to the present head of the family, Captain Frank Dale, who is confused by the world he is in. Burns Mantle said that the play was inspired by a fine chattering patriotism, adding "it is not a cheap, theatrical patriotism, nor a flag-waving bid for applause, but 'American Landscape' is going to the depths of a sensitive and worried citizen's soul."

"Unconquered" by James Bertram is the vivid journal of one man's year of adventure in the war zones of North China, among the fighting peasants and guerrillas, written against the background of his observation of the events and people in Japan before and after the war began. The author is a young New Zealander who went to Oxford as a Rhodes scholar. After Oxford he went to the Orient as a free-lance writer to investigate social and political developments, both in China and Japan. The book cuts deep below the hard surface of politics, economics and strategy, down into the living flesh of millions of human lives swept by catastrophe and yet unconquered. Through it all runs the swift current of his own personal adventures, making a book that has almost the form and all the color of fiction.

Another report from China by the distinguished Chicago Daily News foreign correspondent, Edgar Ansel Mowrer is "The Dragon Wakes." Revealing not only conditions in the east today but indicating what's going to happen next, he expresses the opinion, based on first hand observation in the field, that Japan can't win. He gives two reasons, first, the inability of the Japanese to occupy more of China than the ground their troops stand on, and second, the steadily awakening national consciousness of the whole Chinese people. To write this book he interviewed hundreds of native Chinese as well as scores of foreign observers, talked with business men, mandarins, military authorities, women, workmen, and refugees.

Glamor, mystery and suspense as well as careful documentary detail go into the makeup of the book, "Unsolved Mysteries of the Arctic" by Vilhjalmur Stefansson. Some of the questions answered are: How was the Franklin expedition lost and why? What lay behind the mysterious death from gunshot wounds of Thomas Simpson, explorer, who was by some considered discoverer of the Northwest passage. What happened to Levan-tesky and five companions who disappeared on a flight from Moscow to America by way of the north pole in the summer of 1937? Stephen Leacock's introduction is a delightful essay on the pleasures of arctic exploration.

The latest addition to the Rivers of America series is "The James" by Blair Niles, a native of Virginia. It is a glowing story based upon historical records and tradition and upon intimate personal knowledge. It covers the period from Pocahontas and Captain John Smith to the distinguished Virginians of today, and gives a fascinating account of the restoration of Williamsburg.

"The Far Eastern Policy of the United States" by A. Whitney Griswold, assistant professor of government and international relations at Yale university, is an engrossing and authoritative chronic of 40 years of American diplomacy explaining the meaning of a policy which, since the annexation of the Philippines in 1898, has governed the relations of the United States with its far eastern neighbors. The author presents the historical events, personalities, theories political and economic factors that for 40 years have influenced American statesmen to adhere to a fairly consistent line of conduct in the Far East.

There are two reasons: 1. Appropriation bills thus far introduced and given a chance of passage make it almost inevitable that the Heil administration budget will be considerably higher than Governor Heil's last year's budget. The reason is the steadily growing number of pensioners.

Relief comes in the northern Wisconsin counties and other localities which are sorely stricken which will call for an expenditure of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 for the two year period.

The Heil administration admittedly plans to solve a part of its budget deficiency by diverting a large lump of state highway revenues, which is apart from the regular state budget. However this plan struck trouble this week when the assembly endorsed a bill which would return to municipalities and counties an additional $2,600,000 a year in aid from the state highway fund.

Such an increase in highway aids would seriously lessen the chance that the administration can dip into the highway treasury for its needed extra funds. By inference the action of the assembly can also be taken as a hint to the governor that he should make his financial plans known soon.

If the temper of the legislature at the present time lasts throughout the session, it can be predicted that the Heil administration's budget, despite the drastic cuts which the governor has recommended, will be considerably higher than the budget of the previous session.

Legislators are fully aware that something drastic will have to be done to balance the Heil budget recommendations with the $15,000,000 of estimated receipts for the next two years.

Yet there have already been introduced a dozen big appropriation bills—many of them by administration Republicans—which would skyrocket Heil's budget from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 above his recommendations, and to twice the amount of receipts.

The situation was complicated by the fact that at the weekend worst still was awarded from the executive office on an administration program, and advice on the additional appropriation bills confronting the legislators. Although Republican legislative floorleaders promised a week ago that Heil would make his wishes soon.

State's Budget Threatens to be Bigger Than Ever

Legislators Worried Over Source of Money To Pay Bills

BY JOHN W. WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—The average citizen thus far has paid only casual attention to the doings of the Wisconsin legislature during its five weeks of work, events in senate and assembly will merit his closer attention from now on.

There are two reasons: 1. Appropriation bills thus far introduced and given a chance of passage make it almost inevitable that the Heil administration budget will be considerably higher than Governor Heil's last year's budget. The reason is the steadily growing number of pensioners.

Home Is Like Small Town on Saturday Night When Couple Entertains 60 Guests at Party

THE new home of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Harder at 505 W. Parkway boulevard took on all the aspects of a small western town on a typical Saturday night when the couple entertained 60 guests at a housewarming Saturday evening. The "Oriental Theater," a movie house, featured the traveling and lectures of John Yonan, and "The Grill," a popular night club under the supervision of P. Robert Martin, Washington, D. C., provided the merry-making for the after-theater crowd. Mr. Martin is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kirk.

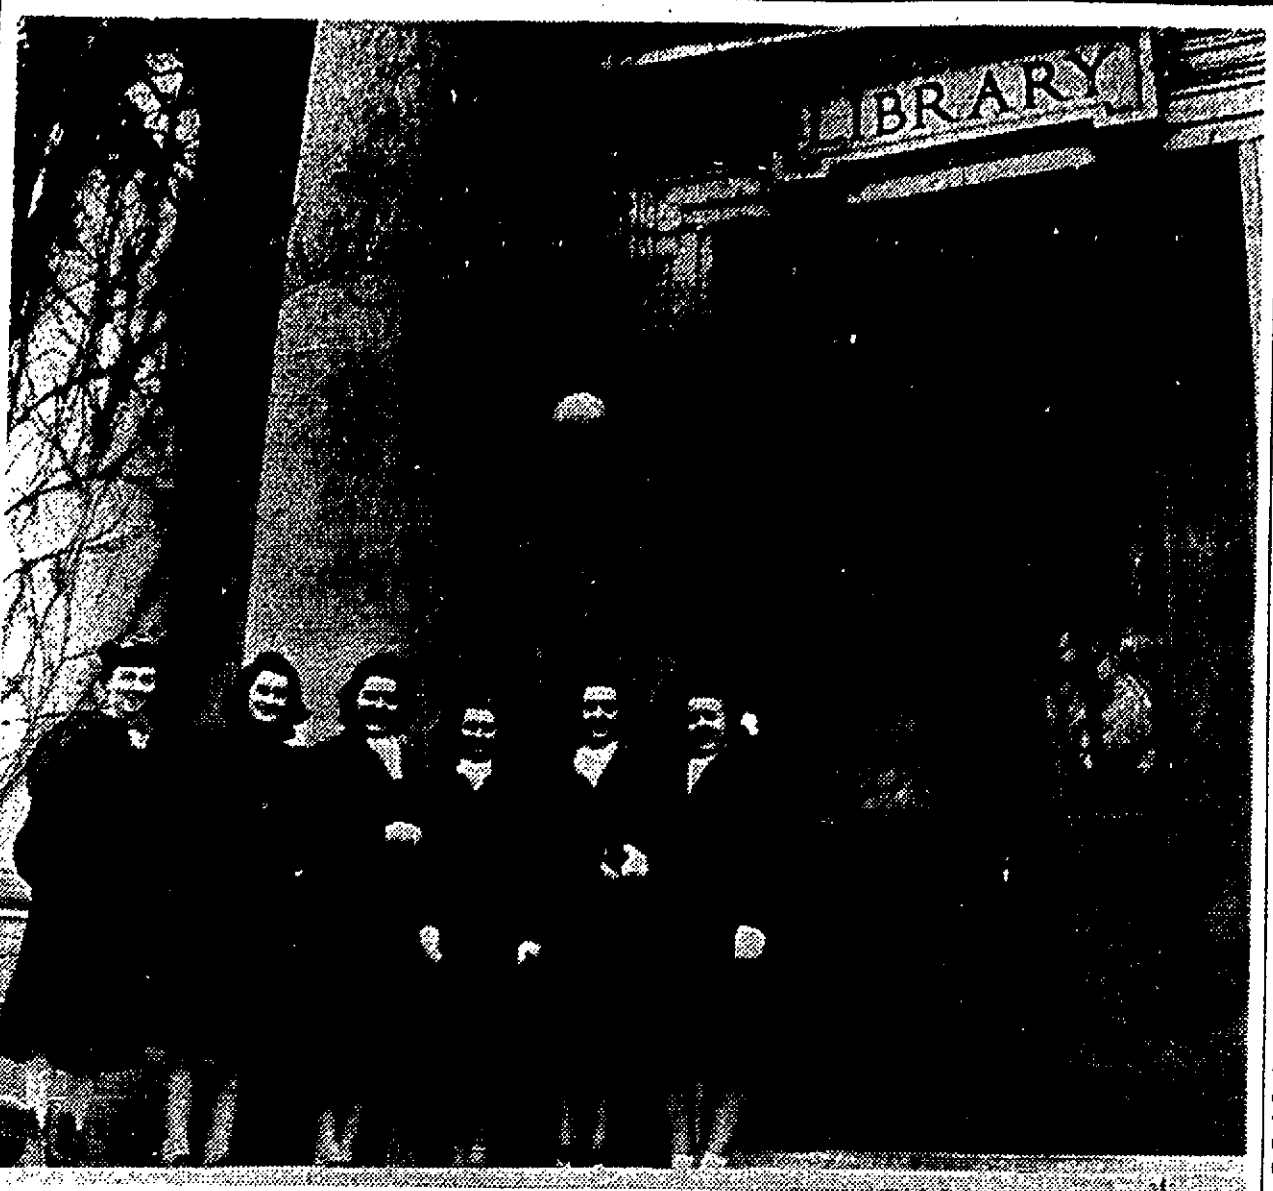

Because the party came so close to the beginning of the Lenten season the movies by Mr. Yonan were especially appropriate since they showed Vatican City, Arabia and the Holy Land, Italy and the Mosque of Kar-ba-la, the latter in color. The theater "management" in an attempt to keep abreast of modern practice held bank-night and the award was given to Jack Kirk. Theater attendants were the Misses Vera Leisner and Erna Naezel and ushers were the Misses Lorraine Hansen and Anna Staerkel. Henry P. Slattery was master of ceremonies at "The Oriental" and Miss Vera Hilgendorf was the blues singer at "The Grill."

A group of friends surprised Mrs. Steve Meidam, 1113 1/2 W. Winnebago street, Saturday evening on the occasion of her birthday anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bogenschütz won the schafskopf prizes and Mrs. Ervin Werner and Mrs. Oliver Mathey the dice awards, while traveling prizes were won by Ervin Werner and Mrs. Karl Krukeberg. Others present included Steve Meidam, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Daniels, Oliver Mathey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burmeister, George Van Ooyen, Miss Luella Helser, Karl Krukeberg, Miss Rosella Froelich, Cleo and Donald Burmeister, Appleton and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewandowski, Kimberly.

Miss Clara Schneider went as hostess at a birthday party Sunday in honor of her sister, Marion, at their home in New London. Chinese checkers and schmeer were played. Those present were the Misses Clara and Mercedes Nyles, Al Nyles, Gordon Durkee, Kaukauna; Jerome Hein, Miss Edith Bruckner, Dundas; Mrs. Sylvan Bodoh, Shiocton; Miss Evelyn Thiel, Black Creek; and Harvey Riske, Marion.

Fraternal Order of Eagles entertained 32 tables of cards Sunday afternoon at Eagle hall, schafskopf prizes going to A. Striegel, Miss Genevieve Bessette, Mrs. Ed Abel, Mrs. E. A. Grager, Mike Wagner, Mrs. Joseph Boelsen, Mrs. John Brandt, Mrs. George David, and dice awards going to Mrs. George Hamilton and Mrs. Walter Shepherd. Mrs. Elizabeth Omachinske won the special prize.

Aimee Zillmer Will Lecture At Y Thursday

To further its campaign against syphilis, the auxiliary to the Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a lecture on "The Control of Social Diseases" by Miss Aimee Zillmer at 8 o'clock Thursday night at the Y. M. C. A. The meeting will be open to any woman interested.

Miss Zillmer is widely acquainted in Appleton through previous contacts. The demand for her straightforward counsel on courtship and marriage has been so much in excess of her heavy schedule that for a number of years her engagements have been made six months to a year in advance, according to Mrs. Jack Kirk, who is in charge of arrangements for the lecture here Thursday night.

Miss Zillmer's notable record of service in her field was given national recognition when the National Parent Teachers' association recently named her chairman of its social hygiene committee. She has also published articles in national magazines and last summer prepared and produced a social hygiene broadcast over a national network.

She has a philosophy that is highly unusual and many of her listeners have observed that unconsciously she reveals woman's greatest weapon for making difficult adjustments in life—a fine sense of humor.

Before her lecture Thursday night she will have dinner with members of the auxiliary committee at the Candle Glow Tea room.

100 Persons Attend Inter-faith Meeting

At Appleton Church

About 100 persons attended the inter-faith meeting last night at First Congregational church at which representatives of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths gave short talks and answered questions from the audience. Speakers were Rabbi Myer Kripke, Milwaukee, for the Jews; the Rev. Alfred W. Swan, D.D., Madison, for the Protestants; and the Rev. Gerard Hesse, O.M. Cap., assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church, for the Catholics.

The speakers drew lots to determine the order of their talks, and each spoke for 20 minutes, explaining some of the salient points of their faiths. Questions were then asked by the audience for nearly half an hour. Dr. John B. Hanna, pastor of the Congregational church, arranged the inter-faith meeting.

Badger Congressmen Meet Wisconsin Folk

Living in U. S. Capital

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau Washington—New members of the Wisconsin delegation took a bow last week when they were formally welcomed by the Wisconsin State Society of Washington, at a reception at the Carlton Hotel.

Former presidents of the society joined the congressmen and their wives in the receiving line headed by Mr. and Mrs. William R. Bennett of Madison. There was an hour of dancing and then Rep. Johns, introduced by acting president Bennett, took charge of the entertainment.

One by one he called his fellow members to the front, beginning with Rep. Merlin Hull, Black River Falls Progressive, because, said Johns, "He is the dean of the delegation."

Reps. Frank B. Keefe of Oshkosh and Bernard J. Gehrmann, Mellen Progressive, did not attend the reception and neither Sen. Robert M. La Follette Jr. nor Sen. Alexander Wiley could be present.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you. But if you are tired, listless and third-rate, men will ignore you. Men don't like "old" girls. When they go to parties they want girls who are full of pep. So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to get "pep" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and better dress from inside functional disorders.

450 Persons Attend Initial Performance Of Zion Church Play

A crowd of more than 450 persons witnessed the first performance of "Reach for the Moon," 3-act comedy presented by the Brotherhood of Zion Lutheran church Sunday night at the parish school auditorium. Both Miss Arloa Dischoff and George Schoenke who took the leading roles gave smooth performances, and Clarence Klitzke in his comedy role brought many laughs from the audience. The scene at the end of the second act was especially good, showing Herman Ecker as the Indian house man assisting in the kidnapping of Klitzke's bride.

The Misses Marion Steadt, Hildegarde Krueger and Elaine Stecker were well cast as three young girls at the dude ranch, and others in the cast who took their parts well were the Misses Ellen Hoffman, Hedwig Fabricius and Elsie Bauernfeld, Edgar Leisinger, Sylvester Peotter, Roy Sager and Everett Stecker. The lighting was well handled by Hillard Weiss, particularly the thunder and lightning scenes.

The play will be repeated at 8:15 tonight at the auditorium. Last night the members of the cast presented their director, Mrs. John Engel, Jr., with two dozen roses.

Symphony to Perform at Chapel Mar. 8

TWENTY-EIGHT years ago the Lawrence Symphony orchestra was founded. Percy Fullinwider, newly appointed by Dean Harper to head the violin department, organized a chamber orchestra of 18 pieces, which appeared frequently in concert at Peabody hall, the modestly erected home of Lawrence Conservatory of Music. Since that date the orchestra has steadily grown in size and perfection until its membership totals over 40 and its repertoire includes many of the more ambitious symphonies as well as a variety of shorter concert pieces.

This season the orchestra has been chosen to present the final concert of the Community Artist Series on Wednesday evening, March 8 at Memorial chapel. The orchestra will be assisted by Edward Dudley, New York tenor, who has appeared in concerts from Canada to Bermuda and all through the eastern states. His Appleton appearance is part of a concert tour through the middle west, which includes such cities as Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis and Duluth. In addition to a group of songs with piano accompaniment, Mr. Dudley will sing "Wagner's 'Prize Song' from Wagner's 'Die Meistersinger' with orchestral accompaniment.

Director Fullinwider has chosen

Hollywood—I'm going to watch Joan Crawford's work, during the next year, with even more interest than usual. She has been whirling around in the clutches of an emotional maelstrom ever since her first rift with Franchot Tone and the consequent mental turmoil, have kept her from doing her best work. That's all over now—cut out by her positive action in filing suit for divorce.

And, knowing Joan as I do, I think she will again hurl all of her amazing energy into the single task of reclaiming her lost position near the top of the Hollywood ladder.

Joan, in spite of her intellectual tastes and her never-ending campaign for self-improvement, is basically a creature of moods. She is dominated by them to an unusual degree. When she's emotionally confused, unhappy, it's physically impossible for her to put into her work that verve and dash that once distinguished her from every other star.

Don't be in too great a hurry to write her down as a fading star, for one smash hit can send her skyrocketing back to the top. Metro-Gwynn-Mayer has little in her and she still has millions of devoted fans. Most important of all, she's regained that fighting spirit that she seemed to lose when her second marriage strayed off its course and drifted on the rocks. And Joan—in fighting mood—is unstoppable. No one is more anxious to cheer her comeback than I, for to me she's always been Hollywood at its glamorous best.

Idol-chatter: Come to think about it, Charles McCarthy is the first great Pole-ish star since the Negri. Rueful advice: Play checkers with Richard Dix if you must, but don't lay any bets—the man's unbeatable. When Rhea Gable gets that decree, Ginger Rogers and Loretta Young will take over the dubious distinction of being Hollywood's longest-separated, but not divorced couple. Familiar faces: Franklin Farnum, ex-cowboy—hero, currently playing a bit at Warner Brothers. There's something about Claudette Colbert that always reminds me of Nancy Carroll in her hey-day.

Suppose you might say that Jimmie Cagney and George Raft are co-sparring in "Each Dawn I Die." One thing I like about Nelson Eddy is his punctuality—it's a stellar miracle. Silly ambitions: to hear Jeanette MacDonald singing an aria to the accompaniment of Bob Burns' bazooka. In view of the startling resemblance 'twixt Joan Bennett and Hedy Lamarr, what's so odd about Gene Markey, who married the former, being in love with the latter? Height of something or other: Wendy Barrie's fad of having her discarded clothes made over for her dachshund.

Critique on Dorothy Lamour's harem costume in her current opus: nicely, but nice. And speaking of harem, wouldn't Zasu Pitts, with those weaving hands, have made a great Oriental dancer? If you're looking for a free concert, just give Allan Jones a ring—he invariably sings on his way to the phone. Don't suppose it means anything, but Tyrone Power takes Annabella to church every Sunday A. M. Today's philosophy—from Leo Reisman: Hollywood opinions would be a lot louder if so many of them weren't esteemed.

Today's No. 1 hero is William Demarest, who's playing Sargeant Heat in the "Gracie Allen Murder Case." For the purposes of his characterization, he puffs steadily on a big black pipe. This morning, going into a scene with Warren William and Gracie, he was cautioned by the director to keep the pipe going full-bell—and he did with the self-control of a martyr. Some gagster had stuffed it full of rubber bands!

When the average actress departs from a studio, she simply packs her suitcase, turns the key of her dressing room, and calls for chauffeur. But not Marion Davies, who is now bidding Warner Brothers a final farewell. She's moving her lavish bungalow, which contains priceless handcarved woodwork and iron grills. That bungalow made its first cross-town trek when she came to Warners from Metro. Metro tried to keep the bungalow by refusing permission to tear down the fence—studio property—which incensed it on that lot. Marion merely had the builders jack-up the bungalow high enough to slide it over the fence, and went merrily on her way. A few weeks hence, the bungalow will be installed on a lot in Beverly Hills. Out here, we call it "Marion's baggage."

I'm happy to report that Sally Eilers' four-year-old who balked at a movie career, has seen the light. The other day he accompanied his mama to the projection room to see his first picture. "They Made Her a Spy." And his only comment, after seeing it, was: "There's not enough shots of me!"

Seymour—Members of the Royal Neighbors met at the home of Mrs. Clara Culbertson Friday evening. Husbands were guests of the lodge. Schafkopf and court whist furnished the entertainment after the business meeting. Prizes at schafkopf were won by Charles Rau and Wesley Sherman; at whist by Mrs. Charles Rau and Mrs. Philip Pope. Miss Emma Mattis broke her leg when she got out of a car. The accident which happened Thursday evening was caused by ice on the running board of the car. She was taken to St. Vincent hospital, Green Bay.

Mrs. Caroline Jesse broke a bone in one of her wrists when she stumbled over the end of some linoleum in the kitchen of the American Legion hall Thursday morning.

Winnebago Indians Want U. S. to Return Their Lost Fortune

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau
Washington—Congressman Merion Hull, Black River Falls Progressive, has introduced a bill in the house to provide for the Winnebago Tribe of Indians in Wisconsin, separate hearings on their claims against the government.

The Winnebago, says Congressman Hull, were given in 1820 a reservation covering 13 counties in Illinois and part of Wisconsin from what is now LaCrosse to Green Bay. When that land was found to be valuable they were given, instead, five counties in Iowa.

Since then, says Hull, they have been driven from one place to another until they now have only a fraction of their original grant. There were grants of money too, he says, which have somehow disappeared, like the $480,000 trust fund set up for the tribe, which was invested and lost for them by the Office of Indian Affairs.

There are now, says Hull, between 1,200 and 1,400 Winnebago in isolated groups scattered from the Mississippi bottoms east to Wittenburg, living in cotton wigwags or tar-paper shacks, "in utter destitution."

If the bill is passed they will receive a general review of their rights and the money due them, for the last 120 years.

home immediately. I will see that she arrives back safely. Goodbye," he said.

"And who the devil are you?" Petronella heard her father shout, furiously.

Smiling, Tony Lance hung up on him. He took her by the arm.

"He'll think differently about it tomorrow. But I feel he is right. It is time you got some rest. Don't you agree?" he asked the men, who, realizing the trouble, had crowded to the doorway. They assented.

But Petronella was angry. She felt disappointed and frustrated. What right had father to order her home like that? Or Tony Lance to take her? She stiffened.

"I'm staying." But his hand was firm on her arm. He smiled, and it was as if he had paid her a compliment.

"No, you're coming home, Petrel." He gave her the reason in his persuasive deep voice.

"It is half-past four. They can carry on here perfectly easily without you. There are enough sandwiches to feed the whole force, and plenty of cold drinks. If you get knocked out, you put your irate parent in the right."

Whereas, when he hears the other side of this business, and sees the headline I'm going to get for you in the Rangoon News, I think he'll change his mind, and nearly burst with pride. Tomorrow, you'll be running a really well-organized show, with other women, and servants, to help you. Are you ready?"

"Yes," gulped Petrel. "Good night, everybody!"

They were lent a police car. Petronella sat in the back, between Tony Lance and an Anglo-Indian policeman. A third guard sat alongside the driver, his service revolver ready, in case of emergency.

"A Brave Girl!"

Tony looked down at her face close to his shoulder. "How old are you?"

"Seventeen."

"What made you do that?" She described the scene at the Pwe.

"Peter went back," she finished.

"You ran a canteen so that he should have a cup of coffee! It's a wonderful thing, family affection!"

She laughed with him. But she explained, "A girl feels she has a great many brothers in Rangoon." He looked at her, curiously.

"That's your version of the relationship."

"No, they really are friends. You don't fall in love round every corner, as the older people here seem to think, when they pair us off."

"Some of them must at least imagine themselves in love with you."

"Any girl gets spoilt in Rangoon."

Ahead of them a volley of firing made her jump and cling instinctively to his arm. He leaned forward. "Turn right, driver! We must avoid the fireworks," he joked. But Petronella was shuddering. However hard she tried to prevent it, her teeth chattered together. He heard them.

"I can't stop them," she apologized, ashamed. He was so casual. There was no danger. It was terrible to be so uncontrolled. If she were really to let go, she would cast her head forward, and sob and sob. She could just manage to spare him that. But she kept thinking of those horrible dabs, stained with blood, lying on the floor of the police station, of the incidents the patrols had described to one another, when they forgot her, or thought she was not listening, of the terrified women, and little brown children, who were even at this moment dying of gas.

"You're going to China! What is happening in China?"

He grinned. "A good deal."

"I met a very nice woman, called Miss Horton, Clare Horton, who was going out to help refugees."

"I know her. She's a very fine person. I'll tell her I saw you."

wounds, or cowering, waiting for death, in their frailty shattered houses.

"You'll think I'm a coward."

"Natural physical revulsion! You're one of the bravest girls I've ever met," he told her gently.

"Oh no, I'm not," she denied it.

"Nevertheless, if I had the write-up of this show to do, that is what I'd probably say in headlines for the British breakfast table. They'd like it. That kind of stuff goes over. Probably the fellow who is covering this for my paper will agree with me, and do the same."

"I hope not," Petronella was sure Peter would do nothing of the kind.

"Any idea who he is? They gave some young fellow the opening. He was coming out on an ordinary job. The news gets cabled from Calcutta. But it isn't the same as a first-hand story. I might give him the dope about you, tonight. They seemed to think he might make a mess of things."

"No, you mustn't! Anyway, how should I know who he is?" Petronella denied, defiantly. Doubt, as well as modesty, checked her confessing the truth. Perhaps Peter would make a mess of it. Perhaps his articles would be refused. If he failed, the fewer people who knew about it, the better. She changed the subject hastily.

"You're going to China! What is happening in China?"

He grinned. "A good deal."

Argument Over Fouls Break Up CYO, Brew Game

Team Managers Will Settle
Debate Over City
League Battle

Standings:	W. L.

CYO	2 0

Sunday's Results
D-X Oils 47, Pantry Lunch 25.
Pulpmakers 33, Gustmans 27.

Kaukauna — Mellow Brews and CYO dives played over three quarters of their battle for the City League lead yesterday afternoon before an argument broke up the game with the Brews leading 29 to 25. In other games the Pulpmakers won out by virtue of a fourth quarter rally over Gustmans, 39 to 27, and the D-X cagers had an easy time of it, adding the Pantry Lunch 47 to 25.

The Brew-CYO argument began when a foul was called on Charley Bloch. The scorebook showed it was his fourth offense, and, as the Brews were already playing with only four men, if he had had to leave the game the CYO would have won by a forfeit. Bloch and his teammates insisted it was his third. A meeting of the team managers will be called to decide how to rule on the game, President James T. Judd said.

Pulpmakers Win
Bud Bootz continued his sharp-shooting by pouring through 21 points for the Pulpmakers, who led 11 to 6 at the quarter, 17 to 14 at the half and 24 to 23 as the last period opened. A Gustman free throw tied the count at 24-all but the winners pulled away to an easy win. Jacobson connected for five baskets and three free throws for the losers. Using only five men the D-X Oils, first half champs, took an early lead over the Pantry Lunch, 24 to 11 at the half, and coasted to their second win to tie the Pulpmakers for second place. Ed Eiting led the Oils with 14 points, while Ross Farwell had 9 for the Lunchers.

Be A Careful Driver

Waupaca County Established 88 Years Ago by Legislature

Royalton — Feb. 17 was the eighty-eighth anniversary of Waupaca county, which was established in 1851 by a legislative act.

The first county officers were: Sheriff, John M. Vaughn; register of deeds, W. G. Cooper; county treasurer, C. E. P. Hobart; surveyor, George W. Taggart; clerk of supervisors, James Smiley; coroner, John Boyd.

The first county seat was established at the village of Mukwa. The village was platted by B. F. Phillips and August Grignon, but had been a trading post of a half-breed Indian for about 13 years previously.

When the county seat was moved away the village disappeared and today its exact location is difficult to locate, as in May, 1871, at a session of the county board the village plan of Mukwa was vacated.

After many years of political controversy on the permanent location of the county seat it was settled at Waupaca and in 1880 an appropriation of $15,000 was voted to build the courthouse there.

This sum, $3,000 was to be raised by taxation, the balance to be raised from the sale of county lands, and out of donations. The city of Waupaca was to raise $7,000. During the years of the county seat contest Ogdensburg, Weyauwega and New London all aspired to it. One of the projects engaged in at that time was the building of a plank road through the center of the county. Its chief promoters were Reeder Smith, James Melkjohn and Judge C. S. Ogden. It is said the Melkjohns invested about $1,000 in the road.

The road proved to be too great an enterprise and when the county seat dispute was finally settled the project was abandoned.

A daughter was born Feb. 13 to Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Roberts. Mrs. Roberts was Miss Lena Berg before her marriage.

Carroll Ritchie and Morgan Van Ornum are the members of the committee named by the Congressional Men's club for the next meeting Tuesday, March 14. Thirty-six men were present Feb. 14.

Otto Redman and Carroll Ritchie, Royalton township committeemen in the agricultural adjustment administration, will attend a second school of instruction for the field men of each township in Waupaca county to be held at Clintonville, Feb. 23.

The following committee has been named to prepare for the March Community meeting at Northport: Mrs. Vern Edelman, Miss Ella McGarity, Fred Poppy, Alice Jane Babcock, Genevieve Schoenick and Alice Smiley. S. P. Wilson, Deer Lodge, Mont., a former Northport resident, has been the guest of relatives there, when enroute west from a trip to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Mike Mack Gives Bridge Party at Home

Shiocton — Mrs. Mike Mack was hostess to the Ladies Bridge club at her home Thursday afternoon. Honors were awarded to Mrs. G. M. La Croix, who also received the carrying prize. The consolation gift went to Mrs. Will Oaks. Mrs. Clark Wilcox will entertain the club at her home next Thursday afternoon.

A rummage sale will be conducted at the Congregational church parlors Wednesday afternoon. Lunch will be served.

The Nimble Thimble club was entertained by Mrs. Mike Mack at her home Friday afternoon. Members present included Mrs. Roy Gilkey, Mrs. Orlo Valentine, Mrs. Will Steele, Mrs. Wilford Spoehr, Mrs. Wall Oaks and Mrs. George Penn. Mrs. Raymond Wilkerson was a guest. Mrs. George Penn will entertain the club at its next meeting.

A three-legged foxhound runs with the pack at Southport, N. C. and is never far behind when the fox is cornered.

Eight of Wisconsin Mammals Spend Winter in Hibernation

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Of the more than 30 distinct species of mammals found in the state only eight spend the winter in hibernation and of these eight there are several whose sleep is broken up with periods of awakening and wandering, especially if the winter is a mild one. The eight sleepers are the black bear, raccoon, skunk, striped ground squirrel, chipmunk, woodchuck, jumping mouse and the bat.

In mild weather the bear, skunk and jumping mouse are often awake and active and, to a lesser extent we may occasionally find a woodchuck, or "groundhog" or even a chipmunk wide awake through the winter. The soundest sleeper in this group of hibernators appears to be the striped ground squirrel, "gopher," to most of us.

Can't Stand Cold
The ground squirrel spends the winter in its nest, a side chamber off the long winding burrows under ground. Part of the burrow is filled with seeds which the gopher family feeds on before they drop off into their deep sleep and upon awakening in spring. These animals cannot survive zero weather and if the nest is too shallow or if the frost penetrates deep into the ground, many of them die during their hibernation sleep.

Another of the squirrel group, the chipmunk, is considered a hibernator, in most of the state at least, because we seldom see them about after October or before the first of April. Like the gopher, the chipmunk stores great quantities of food in its underground den. Seeds of various cultivated and wild plants, grain and nuts are its food.

Our other squirrels, the fox, gray, red and flying, will often remain in their dens for many days during severe winter storms. Some of this time is spent in sleep but as soon as the storm is over they become active again and so they cannot be called hibernators. The flying squirrel appears to dislike the cold more than the rest of the group and is the least active during the winter.

Like Green Food
The woodchuck, or groundhog, belongs to the squirrel family, but unlike the rest of his tribe he does not put in a store of food for the winter. When it is time for them to den one or two will "hole up" in a snug corner of their burrow and sleep until spring. They prefer green vegetation and growing roots and grain, so perhaps that is why they don't store food.

From its habit of traveling by frog-like leaps the jumping or leaping mouse gets its name. This little animal spends the winter in holes underground or in hollow trees. Sometimes, but not always, food is stored in these nests. They usually remain underground for six months of the year but it is believed that not all of this time is spent in sleeping.

The bear, raccoon and skunk are three hibernators who make no provisions for winter beyond fattening up for their winter's sleep, which by the way, is not at all as profound as that of the woodchuck, or the gopher. When it is time to go into winter quarters they choose a secluded, sheltered spot. A bear's favorite den is the hollow formed by an uprooted tree. Often a bear scrapes into the hollow a stack of dried leaves, to make his bed more comfortable.

Red Bat Stays Here

Raccoons like to travel and live in company and through the winter a whole family can be found comfortably sleeping in a hollow tree. Skunks spend the winter in a burrow, either one of their own making or the deserted home of a woodchuck. They line their nest with grass and leaves. The period of time spent in hibernation depends upon the severity of the winter.

In Wisconsin we have three species of bats, the big brown, the little brown and the red bat. The last named is the one we most often find in winter, hanging by its toes in a profound sleep in some attic or shed. Some bats migrate to warmer climates when winter approaches but the red bat usually remains here all the year.

Last winter my husband brought home two red bats which he found in the shop where he works. We placed them in a shoe box and kept

Kidnap-Slayer Wins Delay to Permit Appeal

Franklin Pierce McCall
Granted Stay of Execution
Until Friday

Ralston, Fla. — (AP) — Franklin Pierce McCall, his head shaved for the electric chair, today was granted a stay of execution until Friday to permit an appeal to the United States Supreme Court of his conviction in the death of 5-year-old James Bailey Cash, Jr., who was kidnapped and killed last May.

McCall was to have died at the state prison farm here today. Superintendent L. F. Chapman of the prison said he ordered postponement under authority given by the death warrant to hold executions any day of the week set by the governor. He said he acted after a telephone conversation with Governor Fred P. Cone. The stay was obtained after relatives bade tearful goodbyes yesterday to the youth who confessed kidnapping the Cash child at Princeton, Fla., May 28 and collecting $10,000 ransom after his victim was dead.

C. A. Avriett of Jasper, McCall's attorney, said he would go to Washington immediately to present the case to the United States Supreme Court.

Slayer Executed
Paul Fried Bunge, convicted slayer of his wife and two children, was executed in the electric chair at 10:12 a. m.

The governor yesterday stayed the death of Clyde Hysler of Jacksonville for 30 days because charges had not been finally settled against the convicted murderer's two alleged accomplices. Hysler was convicted as the instigator of a holdup slaying.

McCall pleaded guilty to kidnapping. His attorney contended he should have had a jury trial because the Florida kidnapping law allows a jury to recommend a life sentence.

McCall also was charged with murdering the Cash boy but was not tried on the charge.

The Cash child was stolen from his bed while his parents were at work in their filling station, adjoining the Cash home. McCall contended the boy smothered when he held a handkerchief over his mouth to prevent outcry. He said he wanted $10,000 to supply his wife with fine clothing and luxuries. All but $5 of the ransom was recovered.
